Memphis, TN based company WeeSprout has announced that their recently launched organic swaddle blankets have been very well received by customers nationwide. The company states that they have already received feedback on the Amazon marketplace by more than 100 reviewers, who have collectively given the product a 5 star rating.

Brandon Wells, co-founder of the company, states, "We are very pleased at how happy our customers seem to be with our new swaddling blankets. We always strive for the utmost in customer satisfaction and reading those reviews really makes us feel as if we're reaching our goals."

The blankets, which can be seen on Amazon at http://www.amazon.com/Organic-Cotton-Swaddle-Blankets-WeeSprout/dp/B018T9UBFC, are super soft organic cotton and according to Wells, contain cute gender neutral patterns.

"We didn't want our first design to be something for a boy or something for a girl," Wells states. "We wanted to make picking out a baby gift easy, by offering a gender neutral pattern."

The animal designs are one of the things that customers have been praising about the blankets. Most people, however, state that the softness and the fact that they are made from organic cotton was their main reason for purchasing. The company says that their blankets are made from all organic muslin cotton and that they are breathable, safe, and chemical free. The blankets are also 20 percent larger than many other swaddling blankets currently on the market according to the company, which their customers also appreciate. Wells states that these are not the tiny receiving blankets that most parents are used to getting at showers. They are large, soft blankets that the company says are sure to help any infant fall asleep much more easily.

Those interested can read more about the blankets and their specific benefits on WeeSprout's official website at http://www.weesprout.com/products/organic-cotton-muslin-swaddle-blankets.

Wells states that the 100 percent GOTS certified organic cotton is likely the primary reason that customers have given it such high reviews on the marketplace.
