May 29, 2026

WASHINGTON, UT - May 29, 2026 - PRESSADVANTAGE -

A Plus Garage Door Repair has announced an extended installation program for residential properties in Washington, Utah, running through July 31, 2026. The program introduces a structured pricing adjustment of $200 for new garage door installations as part of the company's expansion of services in Washington County.

The announcement comes as the residential construction and renovation sector in Washington County continues to experience steady growth, with building permits for home improvements increasing by approximately 15 percent over the past year according to county records. The extended timeframe allows property owners to schedule installations across multiple seasons, addressing both immediate replacement needs and planned renovations.

"We are implementing this extended program to accommodate the growing demand for garage door installations in Washington County," said Carrie Kelsch, spokesperson at A Plus Garage Door Repair. "The 18-month timeframe provides flexibility for homeowners who are planning renovations as part of larger home improvement projects or addressing aging garage door systems."

A Plus Garage Door Repair serving Washington provides installation services for various garage door types including steel, glass, insulated, aluminum, wood, and custom configurations. The company's installation process includes assessment of existing infrastructure, removal of outdated systems, and integration with current home automation systems where applicable.

The program applies to new installations scheduled Monday through Friday between 8 a.m. and 5 p.m. Financing options are available through third-party providers for qualified applicants, with terms determined by individual credit assessments. The pricing adjustment cannot be combined with other programs and requires presentation at the time of service scheduling.

Garage doors typically require replacement every 15 to 30 years depending on material composition, usage patterns, and maintenance history. Current industry data indicates that garage door replacements represent approximately 4 percent of home exterior renovation projects nationally, with insulated models accounting for 62 percent of new installations in climate zones similar to Washington County.

"The technical requirements for modern garage door installations have evolved significantly with the introduction of updated safety standards and energy efficiency codes," added Kelsch. "Our installation teams are certified to work with current building codes and manufacturer specifications across all major brands."

The company maintains certifications from industry organizations including the International Door Association and participates in ongoing technical training programs. Installation services include spring system configuration, opener integration, and safety sensor calibration according to manufacturer specifications.

A Plus Garage Door Repair operates from its Washington facility at 1562 Arabian Way E, providing services throughout Washington County. The company employs certified technicians and maintains inventory of components for various garage door systems.
