

Disaster Plus Expands Water Damage Restoration Response Capabilities to Address Growing Demand in Summerville

May 28, 2026

MT PLEASANT, SC - May 28, 2026 -
Disaster Plus, a leading building restoration service provider based in Mount Pleasant, South Carolina, has announced expanded response capabilities to address the increasing demand for rapid water damage restoration services in Summerville and surrounding communities. The expansion comes as property owners face heightened risks from seasonal weather patterns and aging infrastructure that contribute to water-related property damage.

The company, which has served the greater Charleston area for over 37 years, has enhanced its emergency response protocols and technical resources to ensure faster deployment times for properties affected by water damage incidents. This development addresses a critical need in the region where delays in water damage mitigation can lead to extensive structural damage, mold growth, and significantly higher restoration costs.

"Water damage requires immediate attention to prevent secondary issues that can compromise both the structural integrity of a property and the health of its occupants," said Keating Norris, Director of Operations at Disaster Plus. "Our expanded capabilities allow us to respond more efficiently to the growing number of service calls we receive from Summerville residents and businesses, ensuring properties are properly restored and protected from long-term damage."

Disaster Plus in Summerville, SC addresses various water damage scenarios, including air conditioner leaks, broken pipes, appliance malfunctions, storm damage, and high indoor humidity issues. The company's IICRC-certified technicians utilize advanced moisture detection equipment and industrial-grade drying systems to thoroughly address both visible and hidden water damage in residential and commercial properties.

The expansion of services comes at a time when property owners increasingly recognize the importance of professional water damage restoration. Recent industry data indicates that water damage claims represent one of the most frequent insurance claims filed by property owners, with costs escalating significantly when restoration is delayed beyond the initial 24-48 hour window.

For commercial properties in particular, rapid water damage restoration proves essential in minimizing operational disruptions and preventing revenue loss. The company's enhanced response capabilities ensure businesses can resume normal operations more quickly while maintaining compliance with health and safety standards.

Beyond immediate water extraction and drying services, Disaster Plus water damage restoration provides comprehensive solutions, including mold remediation, structural repairs, and assistance with insurance claim documentation. The company's technicians conduct thorough assessments to identify all affected areas and develop customized restoration plans that address both immediate and potential long-term concerns.

The company maintains 24/7 emergency response availability throughout SC, recognizing that water damage incidents can occur at any time and require immediate professional intervention. This round-the-clock service commitment ensures property owners have access to professional restoration services when a time-sensitive response makes the difference between minor repairs and major reconstruction.
