LOS GATOS, CA - May 28, 2026 - PRESSADVANTAGE -

On Purpose Chiropractic has provided chiropractic care in Santa Clara County, CA since opening its doors in Los Gatos in 2000. The practice, led by Dr. Adam Kleinberg, continues to deliver spinal correction services to patients across different age groups in the region as part of ongoing community health support.

Dr. Adam Kleinberg established On Purpose Chiropractic with an emphasis on detailed patient evaluations and customized care plans. The office delivers general chiropractic adjustments along with specialized applications including prenatal care via the Webster Technique and spinal decompression therapy for suitable candidates. Individuals seek services at the practice for assistance with spinal alignment, injury recovery support, and routine wellness maintenance.

Dr. Kleinberg first encountered chiropractic care at age 13 when severe low back pain restricted his movement. A suggestion from an aunt, who was a chiropractic patient, led to an appointment that provided relief. Later, discussions with a close friend who had entered the profession highlighted the broader principles of chiropractic. This interaction guided Dr. Kleinberg toward formal training at Bridgeport College of Chiropractic. During his studies, he identified a connection between a childhood fall at age nine and subsequent spinal changes that manifested four years afterward.

In chiropractic college, Dr. Kleinberg co-founded the Technique Club and participated in a mission trip to Panama. The team delivered adjustments to approximately 4,000 individuals across five days in locations such as schools, hospitals, and prisons. These international experiences expanded his clinical exposure. Following graduation and receipt of his Doctor of Chiropractic degree, Dr. Kleinberg practiced in seven countries on three continents, including time in London, Amsterdam, and Dublin. He chose to establish his practice in Los Gatos due to the area's community environment and access to the central coast.

On Purpose Chiropractic maintains a family-oriented approach, offering services appropriate for prenatal, pediatric, and adult patients. Certification in the Webster Technique enables specific support for expecting mothers. Spinal decompression therapy is available for cases involving disc-related concerns. The office setting features a welcoming atmosphere with staff dedicated to attentive patient interactions. Since 2000, the practice has served as a consistent resource for residents throughout Santa Clara County seeking structured chiropractic programs.

"After chiropractic worked for me personally, I wanted to help others," said Dr. Kleinberg. "It is a simple, natural process based on the idea of innate intelligence in the body that runs everything. If we can keep that intelligence connected to the body, you can have a healthier, happier life."

Dr. Kleinberg has maintained consistent personal chiropractic care for more than 30 years. He incorporates physical activity into his routine based on prior experience as a personal trainer. He has adhered to a vegan diet for 25 years and engages in outdoor pursuits including bike riding. Family life holds central importance for Dr. Kleinberg, who published the book "Shine Your Love on the World: Letters to My Daughters" in 2014.

The practice model at On Purpose Chiropractic prioritizes comprehensive consultations to understand patient histories and objectives. Appointments allocate sufficient time for thorough assessments of spinal mechanics and related factors. Dr. Kleinberg's background across multiple clinical settings supports the application of varied adjustment methods suited to individual presentations. Patients include families, active adults, and individuals at various stages of life who incorporate chiropractic services into their regular health regimens.
