June 04, 2026

KNOXVILLE, TN - June 04, 2026 -
Milton Tech Commercial Security Systems today announced the launch of its redesigned website, providing Tennessee businesses with streamlined access to comprehensive information about commercial security solutions, including CCTV systems, access control, and network infrastructure services.

The new digital platform organizes detailed information about the company's nine core service categories and security products, making it easier for businesses across Middle and Eastern Tennessee to evaluate security options for their facilities. The website enhancement reflects the growing demand for integrated commercial security solutions across various industries, from healthcare facilities and schools to manufacturing plants and government buildings.

"The launch of our new website represents our commitment to making security planning more accessible for Tennessee businesses," said Michael Miller, Founder and CEO of Milton Tech Commercial Security Systems. "By organizing our service information more effectively, we're helping facility managers and business owners understand their security options without the complexity that often accompanies commercial security planning."

The enhanced website features comprehensive sections covering commercial CCTV and video surveillance, access control and PLC systems, network infrastructure design, remote monitoring capabilities, perimeter protection, commercial sound systems, system infrastructure, security assessments and designs, and emergency notification systems. Each service area includes detailed explanations of applications and benefits specific to different industry sectors.

Milton Tech security services encompass a broad range of industries throughout the region, including construction sites requiring temporary surveillance, healthcare facilities needing controlled access systems, educational institutions implementing emergency notification protocols, and banking facilities requiring integrated security solutions. The company maintains local operations in Knoxville, serving Knox County, Blount County, and Sevier County with dedicated technical teams.

The website also showcases the company's security product offerings, including 8-channel and 16-channel NVR systems, PoE network switches, and various security camera configurations. These products complement the company's installation and maintenance services, providing businesses with complete security solutions backed by a two-year warranty.

Operating under Tennessee Alarm Systems Contractors License #2396, the company maintains full licensing and insurance coverage for all commercial security installations. The local Knoxville team provides site planning, project installation, and ongoing support for commercial, industrial, and multi-family properties throughout Eastern Tennessee, with most commercial clients receiving dispatch within seven days, depending on project scope.

The website launch comes as businesses across Tennessee increasingly recognize the importance of integrated security systems for protecting assets, ensuring employee safety, and maintaining operational continuity. Recent industry data indicates growing adoption of networked security solutions that combine video surveillance, access control, and emergency notification capabilities into unified platforms.

Milton Tech Commercial Security Systems specializes in designing and implementing customized security solutions for businesses throughout Eastern Tennessee. The company provides comprehensive security assessments, system design, installation, and ongoing support services for organizations ranging from small businesses to large industrial facilities.
