

Tankinz Enhances Fortune Cookies for Weddings and Events

July 06, 2026

SALT LAKE CITY, UT - July 06, 2026 -

Tankinz Noodle Manufacturing LLC is enhancing its personalized fortune cookie offering for weddings and celebrations by giving organizers greater control over messages, product presentation, and packaging options. The company produces fresh-baked fortune cookies for customers across the United States, planning weddings, baby showers, gender reveals, parties, and other personal occasions.

Operating nationally through Fortune Cookie Guy, the Salt Lake City-based confectionery producer creates fortune cookies made to order, individually wrapped, and shipped nationwide. The service is designed for customers planning events where customized messaging is part of the guest experience and where physical favors are distributed during a celebration.

Wedding favors are a central use case for personalized fortune cookies, with customers able to include names, dates, thank-you messages, or short themed wording inside each cookie. The product can be used at receptions, table settings, gift bags, or other parts of an event where guests receive a small item connected to the occasion. The enhanced focus on customization gives event organizers more room to connect the look and message of the cookie with the celebration.

The same product structure applies to baby showers, gender reveals, and announcement-based events. In those settings, the message inside the cookie can reflect the theme of the occasion or communicate a short personal note. The individual wrapping supports practical distribution at gatherings, while the made-to-order process allows each order to be tied to the purpose of the event.

Tankinz Noodle Manufacturing LLC also offers customization options, including chocolate-dipped cookies, colored coatings, sprinkles, and packaging formats, such as takeout-style boxes. These features give customers ways to match the cookies' visual presentation to the event without changing the core structure of a personalized fortune cookie. The company's work in this area supports its role as both a confectionery producer and an event favor supplier.

The business produces all cookies in-house, which supports consistency and direct control over the custom order process. Its small batch production model allows the company to handle small custom orders as well as large-volume orders, depending on the scale of the celebration. This order flexibility is relevant for customers planning private gatherings, organized parties, and larger events.

The company's product details include fresh-baked production, premium ingredients, no preservatives, vegan recipes, and a facility with no tree nuts or peanuts. These characteristics are relevant for customers selecting food-based favors, although the business does not present the cookies as allergy-free. The emphasis remains on clear product information, message customization, and event suitability.

Rufus Sprague, Manager of Tankinz Noodle Manufacturing LLC, said, "Customers planning celebrations are often looking for a way to include a message that feels personal to the event. The cookies provide a format where that message can be shared with each guest as part of the experience."

The company's national online model supports customers who are planning events outside Utah as well as those near its Salt Lake City base. Orders are fulfilled from Salt Lake City and shipped across the United States, which makes the service relevant for event organizers who need custom favors delivered for a scheduled date. The model also reflects the company's position as an online business rather than a local storefront.

Tankinz Noodle Manufacturing LLC serves individual customers, families, and event planners who need personalized favors for specific occasions. The company's celebration-focused service connects custom messages with practical event distribution, allowing cookies to be used as favors, announcements, or themed guest items. That focus remains tied to the company's broader work in custom fortune cookie production.

Further information about event-based services can be found through the company website. Visual examples and updates from the business are also available on the Fortune Cookie Guy Instagram profile.
