Three slideouts and a six-point hydraulic leveling system support setup at campsites.

Interior layout centers on a rear living area equipped with two sleeper sofas, overhead cabinets, and a

The kitchen incorporates a 19-cubic-foot 12-volt residential refrigerator, four-burner Lusso range, microwave, sink, pantry, and hutch with LG solid surface countertops and LED motion lighting. A turntable dinette offers adaptable seating. The bathroom contains a 48-inch by 30-inch shower, and the front bedroom includes a king bed, extensive closet space, a smart TV, and additional seating with storage. Bronze hardware, atrium windows, roller shades, and a Maxx fan with a rain sensor complete the living spaces.

Exterior features encompass an outdoor countertop prep area, pull-out grill, and two friction-hinge adjustable awnings with LED lighting and manual override. The model supports optional upgrades such as dual-pane windows, a super solar plus package, slideout awning toppers, generator prep, and full-body paint. It sleeps up to six people and includes a washer and dryer provisions. Additional engineering elements consist of the TSC touring coil suspension, Curt 8,000-pound axles, color-coded and numbered wiring, and a Helux series coil spring pin box for towing stability. A 40,000 BTU furnace, 40,500 BTU air conditioning with three units, and 50-amp electrical service manage climate control.

This addition aligns with demand for high-end fifth wheels in the Paradigm series, which maintains consistent emphasis on residential-style comfort across floor plans. The 388SP joins other models in the lineup at Wilkins RV, providing options for travelers prioritizing space and amenities.
