

Filmgear Canada Strengthens Local Access to Aputure and Amaran Lighting for Canadian Filmmakers

June 11, 2026

Vancouver, BC - June 11, 2026 - PRESSADVANTAGE -

Filmgear Canada is expanding local access to Aputure and Amaran LED lighting equipment through its Vancouver showroom and Canadian online store, helping filmmakers, gaffers, studios, schools, houses of worship, and production teams source professional lighting gear within Canada.

As video production continues to grow across commercial, documentary, corporate, broadcast, and independent film projects, Canadian production teams increasingly need lighting systems that are portable, colour-accurate, and suitable for both small crews and larger production environments. Aputure and Amaran products have become widely used across modern production workflows, from compact creator setups to professional cinema lighting packages.

For many Canadian buyers, sourcing professional lighting equipment from outside the country can create practical challenges, including cross-border shipping delays, duties, uncertain availability, and warranty or support questions. Local access to Filmgear Canada Aputure and Amaran lighting can help production teams reduce procurement uncertainty and keep projects moving on schedule.

Filmgear Canada supports this need by offering Aputure and Amaran lighting equipment through its Vancouver-based showroom and Canadian online store. Customers can browse lighting fixtures, modifiers, and related production equipment online, while local Vancouver-area buyers also have the option to visit the showroom to view selected gear in person before purchasing.

Product lines available through Filmgear Canada include Aputure STORM fixtures, Light Storm products, Filmgear Canada INFINIBAR lighting, MC Pro panels, lighting modifiers, and Amaran lights for creators, studios, and small production teams. This range gives Canadian filmmakers and production professionals access to lighting options for different project scales, budgets, and technical requirements. Whether outfitting a single-camera documentary shoot or a multi-light commercial production, the available product selection covers a broad spectrum of professional needs across different crew sizes and production formats.

Beyond product availability, Filmgear Canada Aputure and Amaran lighting provides localized support for Canadian customers who want a clearer purchasing process than ordering through international or grey-market channels. This includes Canadian availability, product guidance, local service communication, and warranty-related support where applicable. For production companies, independent filmmakers, and technical crews that depend on consistent gear performance, these practical support points can make equipment sourcing more predictable. Having a dedicated Canadian source also means customers can reach out directly for pre-purchase questions, compatibility guidance, and post-purchase assistance without navigating international time zones or support channels.

"Aputure and Amaran lighting systems are used across a wide range of Canadian production environments, from creator studios to professional film and commercial sets," said a Filmgear Canada spokesperson. "Our goal is to make it easier for Canadian filmmakers and production teams to access the equipment they need locally, with clearer availability, support, and purchasing options inside Canada."

Located in Vancouver, Filmgear Canada serves customers across British Columbia and Canada with professional cinema, broadcast, lighting, grip, camera, audio, and video equipment. The company works with filmmakers, production companies, gaffers, commercial studios, schools, houses of worship, and content creators looking for practical equipment solutions for production work. As demand for locally sourced professional gear continues to grow, Filmgear Canada remains committed to maintaining a reliable and accessible supply of industry-standard lighting products for the Canadian market.
