Zurich, Zurich - June 17, 2026 -
IntroDrink.ch, a leading Swiss online retailer specializing in premium natural supplements and wellness products, has announced the expansion of its comprehensive portfolio to meet growing consumer demand for science-backed natural health solutions in Switzerland. The company's enhanced product range now encompasses over 100 carefully curated supplements, superfoods, and natural cosmetics, reflecting the increasing preference among Swiss consumers for pure, bioavailable nutritional products.

The expanded portfolio addresses multiple wellness categories including immune system support, fitness and performance nutrition, beauty and anti-aging formulations, detoxification supplements, sleep and relaxation aids, essential vitamins and minerals, adaptogenic plant compounds, superfoods, and natural cosmetics. Each product undergoes rigorous laboratory testing to ensure purity and quality standards that meet the expectations of health-conscious Swiss consumers.

A recent IntroDrink report indicates that Swiss consumers are increasingly prioritizing natural alternatives to synthetic supplements, particularly in categories such as immune support and stress management. The company has responded by introducing specialized formulations featuring ingredients like beta-glucan, echinacea, and elderberry for immune health, alongside adaptogenic herbs including ashwagandha, rhodiola, and medicinal mushrooms such as reishi and lion's mane for stress resilience and cognitive support.

The beauty and anti-aging segment has seen particular growth, with collagen peptides, hyaluronic acid, and astaxanthin emerging as sought-after ingredients among Swiss consumers seeking natural approaches to skin health and vitality. IntroDrink has also expanded its natural cosmetics line to include traditional tallow-based skincare products, Aleppo soap, and organic plant oils, catering to consumers seeking chemical-free beauty solutions.

Fitness enthusiasts represent another key demographic driving demand for clean performance nutrition. The company's fitness and energy category now features creatine, branched-chain amino acids, L-carnitine, and plant-based protein options, all sourced from premium natural ingredients and formulated for optimal bioavailability.

The detoxification and cleansing category has experienced renewed interest, with products containing chlorella, spirulina, zeolite, and liver-supporting plant extracts gaining popularity among consumers focused on supporting their body's natural detoxification processes. Similarly, sleep and relaxation supplements featuring melatonin, valerian, passionflower, and L-theanine address the growing need for natural stress management solutions in modern Swiss society.

IntroDrink's commitment to education distinguishes its approach to IntroDrink natural health promotion. The company maintains an extensive blog featuring science-based articles on topics ranging from vitamin bioavailability to the benefits of omega-3 fatty acids, helping consumers make informed decisions about their supplement choices.

The company has also introduced specialized wellness bundles designed to simplify the selection process for consumers with specific health goals. These curated combinations include immune power bundles, beauty glow packages, detox programs, and energy optimization sets, each combining complementary supplements for enhanced effectiveness.
