

Construction Lawyers Brisbane Highlights Services to Meet Growing Construction Dispute Demand

June 11, 2026

BRISBANE, QLD - June 11, 2026 -
Construction Lawyers Brisbane has highlighted its service capabilities to address the increasing volume of construction disputes across Queensland's building sector. The firm has the capacity to handle complex construction litigation, QBCC adjudication matters, and Security of Payments Act claims as construction disputes continue to rise throughout the state.

The emphasis comes as Queensland's construction industry faces mounting challenges with payment disputes, building defects, and contract disagreements. Recent publicly available information indicates that payment and contractual disputes have increased significantly, with many contractors and property owners seeking legal representation for matters involving building and construction.

The firm has strengthened its team of dual-qualified professionals who possess both legal qualifications and practical construction industry experience. The firm's legal team includes professionals with backgrounds in Design Engineering, Project Management, Project Controls, Scheduling, and Quantity Surveying, providing technical expertise alongside legal knowledge.

The firm offers services across key areas, including QBCC adjudication, Security of Payments Act claims, construction litigation, commercial building disputes, construction negotiation, contract reviews, claims for delay and disruption, contract management, project development strategies, and insurance claims. These services address construction law matters affecting developers, builders, contractors, corporations, and more.

The firm's services enable it to serve clients throughout Queensland, providing comprehensive legal solutions tailored to their unique needs and industry sectors. The firm represents clients across diverse construction sectors, including mining, infrastructure, renewable energy projects, and commercial development.

The firm is a multi-qualified and experienced technico-legal expert. Their commissions vary from a simple independent review and report where they act as an independent expert providing an opinion, to the preparation of a claim management strategy and claim documentation that provides solid substantiation of their client's rights. Because they are engineers who are also registered solicitors, when inevitable, they assist clients by leading the more complex conduct of dispute resolution and litigation proceedings.

The firm's client base encompasses developers, builders, contractors, and corporations. Each client group faces distinct legal challenges in the construction sector, from large-scale contract disputes to individual building defect claims.

The firm provides extensive support to construction industry clients on a range of matters, including compliance issues, contract disputes, and regulatory concerns. This experience enables the firm to deliver practical guidance as clients navigate the increasingly complex legal environment in the construction sector.

The emphasis on services includes capacity for pre-contract audits, identifying standard terms and conditions that may create unnecessary risks for clients. The firm also provides strategic advice on project development and construction-related disputes.

Construction Lawyers Brisbane provides expert services in construction law with a team that combines legal expertise with practical construction industry experience. The firm provides comprehensive legal services to Queensland's construction sector, offering representation in disputes, contract management, and regulatory compliance matters.
