June 10, 2026

PEKIN, IL - June 10, 2026 - PRESSADVANTAGE -

Kelley Construction Contractors, Inc. is highlighting its custom deck construction services for residential clients across Central Illinois. The family-owned contractor uses advanced design technology in its deck planning process, providing homeowners with detailed project visualizations before construction begins.

The service addresses increasing demand for outdoor living spaces across the company's 50-mile service radius in Central Illinois. Kelley Construction provides deck design consultations for residential properties, including guidance on material selection, structural assessments, and detailed project timelines. The company's design-first process gives homeowners a clear picture of that investment before any construction begins.

"Homeowners want to see exactly what their outdoor space will look like before we break ground," said Mike Kelley, founder and CEO of Kelley Construction Contractors. "Our enhanced design process allows clients to make informed decisions about materials, layout, and features while ensuring the final product meets their vision and budget requirements. This technology-driven approach eliminates surprises and ensures complete client satisfaction from concept to completion."

The company's deck construction services encompass custom designs, foundation work, material procurement, and complete installation. Projects include traditional wood decking, composite materials, multi-level structures, and integrated features such as built-in seating and pergolas. The service builds upon Kelley Construction's three decades of experience in residential construction and remodeling throughout the region.

A defining aspect of how the company operates is the direct involvement of ownership and leadership in every project. From the initial design consultation through permitting, construction, and final walkthrough, homeowners work with the same leadership team rather than being handed off to rotating crews or subcontractors. That continuity of accountability is a consistent aspect of how Kelley Construction manages projects across all its residential services.

Kelley Construction is currently accepting deck construction consultations for the 2026 construction season. Homeowners planning outdoor projects can schedule consultations directly with the company's team.

"Quality craftsmanship and clear communication remain our priorities whether we're building a simple platform deck or a complex multi-story structure," said Kelley. "We're seeing demand for everything from straightforward replacement decks to elaborate outdoor entertainment areas, and our design technology helps translate those varied requirements into practical construction plans that meet each homeowner's vision.

The company provides a one-year workmanship warranty on all deck construction projects, covering both materials and installation. This warranty supplements manufacturer warranties on decking materials and hardware components. The warranty commitment reflects Kelley Construction's confidence in its construction methods and materials selection process.

Kelley Construction operates from three office locations to serve residential clients throughout the region. The multiple office locations allow for efficient project coordination and responsive customer service. Each deck project begins with an on-site consultation to assess the property, discuss design preferences, and evaluate site conditions.

The company's deck construction capabilities include ground-level platforms, raised structures, wraparound designs, and multi-tiered installations with integrated design visualization. Free project estimates and design services are included with every consultation, with turnaround delivered within one week.

Kelley Construction's deck design process is part of the company's broader commitment to technology integration across its residential and commercial services. The company continues to evaluate new tools and methods that improve project accuracy and client communication while maintaining its commitment to hands-on craftsmanship and personalized service.
