KTi Marketing, an online marketing company based in Bayahibe, Dominican Republic, has revealed that they were the first to support the Fundacion Dominicana de Estudios Marinos (FUNDEMAR), who have launched a crowdfunding campaign to help restore the Caribbean's coral reef ecosystems. KTi Marketing is well known for their work in assisting local businesses grow their online presence but it also believes in helping to grow the economy of the Dominican Republic, be that through online marketing or through community support.

Kirsten Tilanus, owner and CEO of KTi Marketing, says: "We love our island and we want to do everything we can to make it grow, focusing on building a stable economy, without damaging the beauty of the island itself. We have done significant work with local businesses to get their name out there, but we also want to focus on the delicate ecosystem of the Dominican Republic. Supporting the Fundacion's very important work is one of the ways in which we aim to achieve that."

The foundation aims to raise $5,000 to help restore the Caribbean coral reefs. KTi Marketing has made a significant donation towards this, and they encourage others to follow in their footsteps so that the goal can be reached. To help achieve this, they have also shared the crowdfunding page on the KTi Marketing

Facebook page, and they encourage everyone to like the page to be kept up to date with further developments.

"Our Facebook page is often our first point of contact," adds Kirsten Tilanus. "People can find out about what we are doing, and the businesses we are helping to grow, and also about our other supportive actions, like sponsoring the Fundacion. We will regularly update our followers and likers about progress in the crowdfunding campaign, and we encourage everyone to share that information as well."

On the KTi Marketing YouTube channel, a wealth of information has been released to explain the work that the company actually does. New videos are added regularly, and the company is currently considering doing a feature video on the Fundacion and how they are supporting coral restoration.
