Positive Group LLC Releases Comprehensive Guidance on Dating and HSV Disclosure

June 19, 2026

Chicago, Illinois - June 19, 2026 -
Positive Group LLC, parent company of Meet Positives, has released comprehensive educational resources addressing one of the most challenging aspects of dating with herpes simplex virus - the disclosure conversation. The new guidance provides practical strategies for individuals navigating these sensitive discussions with potential partners.

The educational materials address critical questions about timing, communication approaches, and building confidence when disclosing HSV in dating situations. With millions of adults living with HSV-1 or HSV-2, the need for clear, supportive resources has become increasingly apparent as individuals seek to build meaningful relationships while managing their diagnosis.

"The disclosure conversation represents a significant emotional hurdle for many people living with HSV," said Michael Task, spokesperson for Positive Group LLC. "Through our platform, we've learned that preparation and accurate information can transform these discussions from sources of anxiety into opportunities for building trust and deeper connection with partners."

The guidance emphasizes the importance of choosing appropriate timing for disclosure - after trust has been established but before physical intimacy occurs. The resources outline how to disclose HSV when dating by keeping conversations straightforward and factual, while being prepared to answer questions about transmission risks, treatment options, and relationship safety measures.

According to recent health statistics, approximately one in eight Americans aged 14-49 has HSV-2, while HSV-1 affects an even larger portion of the population. Despite this prevalence, stigma continues to make disclosure conversations particularly challenging for those navigating the dating world.

The educational materials acknowledge that partners may need time to process information and that rejection remains a possibility. However, the guidance emphasizes that an individual's worth and relationship potential extend far beyond their HSV status. Many people respond positively when provided with accurate information in an honest, respectful manner.

The Meet Positives dating site for HSV1 AND HSV2 positive individuals offers an alternative approach where disclosure conversations occur within a community that already understands the realities of living with herpes. The platform facilitates connections between people who share similar experiences, reducing the anxiety often associated with traditional dating scenarios.

Beyond dating connections, the platform provides ongoing educational resources, discussion forums, and community support for individuals at various stages of their journey with HSV. Members can access advice on relationship building, symptom management, and emotional wellness while connecting with others who understand their experiences firsthand.

The release of these educational resources reflects growing recognition that people living with HSV deserve access to practical, judgment-free information about building healthy relationships. As awareness increases and stigma gradually decreases, more individuals are finding confidence in having open, honest conversations about their status with potential partners.

Positive Group LLC operates Meet Positives, a specialized dating and support platform designed for individuals living with sexually transmitted infections. The platform provides matching services, community forums, educational resources, and mobile accessibility to help members build meaningful connections. Through its comprehensive approach to support and education, the company aims to reduce stigma while helping individuals pursue fulfilling relationships with confidence and dignity.
