

RunLocal Marketing Reinforces Commitment to Small Business Online Growth Through Strategic Digital Marketing

June 23, 2026

LONGMONT, CO - June 23, 2026 -
RunLocal Marketing, a Longmont-based digital marketing agency, continues to strengthen its position as a trusted partner for small businesses seeking sustainable online growth throughout Colorado. The agency maintains its focus on helping business owners build long-term marketing assets that generate ongoing value, rather than pursuing short-term tactics that deliver temporary results.

The digital marketing landscape presents significant challenges for small businesses competing against larger organizations with substantial marketing budgets. Many business owners struggle to establish meaningful online visibility while managing daily operations. RunLocal Marketing addresses these challenges through comprehensive strategies that combine web design, website development, organic SEO, and strategic marketing planning.

"Small businesses deserve marketing solutions that grow with them over time," said Valerie Robinson, founder of RunLocal Marketing. "We focus on building sustainable digital foundations that continue generating results long after implementation. This approach helps our clients compete effectively without requiring constant investment in paid advertising or temporary promotional tactics."

The agency operates from its downtown Longmont location, serving businesses throughout Boulder, Weld, and Larimer counties, as well as Front Range communities including Frederick, Firestone, Erie, Lafayette, Boulder, Mead, Dacono, and Loveland. This local presence enables the team to understand the unique challenges and opportunities facing Colorado businesses in various industries.

Run Local Marketing distinguishes itself through its commitment to creating marketing strategies that function as business assets. Rather than implementing quick fixes or relying solely on paid advertising campaigns, the agency develops comprehensive digital marketing frameworks designed to improve visibility, strengthen online presence, and attract qualified customers consistently over time.

The approach reflects a broader philosophy about digital marketing effectiveness. Many businesses experience frustration with marketing efforts that require continuous spending to maintain results. By contrast, sustainable marketing strategies build cumulative value, with each component reinforcing and amplifying the others to create compound growth effects.

"The difference between temporary tactics and sustainable strategy becomes clear when businesses see their online presence continuing to generate leads months and years after initial implementation," added Robinson. "This is particularly important for small businesses that need marketing investments to deliver lasting returns."

The agency's experience spans 15 years in digital marketing, during which time the team has observed significant shifts in how businesses connect with customers online. These changes have reinforced the importance of building robust digital foundations that adapt to evolving search algorithms and consumer behaviors while maintaining core effectiveness.
