

The Phoenix Jewelry & Art Remains Open During St. John Carnival

June 15, 2026

CRUZ BAY, VI - June 15, 2026 - PRESSADVANTAGE -

The Phoenix Jewelry & Art will keep its store and kiosk open throughout the St. John Carnival. The decision ensures that attendees of the annual celebration, running from late June into early July, have convenient access to the store's handcrafted jewelry and art collections.

This availability comes as the island prepares for a series of cultural events that draw both residents and visitors. The store's location in Cruz Bay positions it as a convenient stop amid the festivities. By maintaining operations, the business supports the flow of activity during this key period on the island calendar.

The Phoenix Jewelry & Art operates with a shared table model. This setup unites designers from various backgrounds with local island artists. Each participant contributes pieces that reflect the unique character of the surroundings. The collections include selections from the St. John Bracelet Company, The Hook Company, Denny Wong, JKennedy Design, Patrick Murphy, the Ocean collection, and Ola Kala. These items feature nature-inspired designs, contemporary styles and motifs drawn from sea and tropical elements.

The business traces its origins to a moment when friendship, loss and attachment to the island came together. The team possesses more than a century of combined experience in St. John jewelry, gathered from several now-retired local stores. This expertise shapes the careful curation of all offerings.

Stephanie, spokesperson for The Phoenix Jewelry & Art, said the store and kiosk will remain open to welcome participants in St. John Carnival. The spokesperson noted that the timing is expected to see increased foot traffic from those engaged in the celebrations, providing an opportunity to explore items that capture the island's creative spirit.

The space combines jewelry and art displays. Local artists show their work alongside established designers. This arrangement creates a setting where different creative voices intersect. Attendees during the carnival can browse pendants, bracelets and other wearable or decorative pieces suited to the occasion.

Team members with deep roots in local jewelry traditions stand ready to offer guidance. Their background helps visitors identify selections that align with personal preferences. The store's approach emphasizes craftsmanship and items with lasting significance.

Remaining accessible during the carnival period allows the business to engage with the heightened community activity. The event highlights island culture through music, parades and gatherings. Pieces from the collections can serve as reminders of these experiences.

The inventory features a range of options within a cohesive theme. Nature motifs and marine elements appear throughout the selections. This consistency ensures that each item fits the overall presentation. The shared table continues to incorporate new contributions while maintaining its established focus.

By staying open, the store contributes to the convenience of those attending the festivities. Visitors can incorporate a stop at the location into their plans without disruption. The availability aligns with the store's ongoing role in the island's creative community.

Additional details from the curation process highlight the integration of multiple makers. This model supports a broader narrative shaped by the environment. Selections draw on the color of the sea and the warmth of island life. Such elements make the pieces suitable for both residents and those visiting for special events.

The team's collective experience informs every aspect of the presentation. This foundation helps ensure that offerings meet the expectations of a diverse audience. As the carnival unfolds, the store provides a steady presence amid the celebrations.

The Phoenix Jewelry & Art operates as a jewelry and art store that curates handcrafted pieces inspired by the sea, community and island life. The space brings together designers and local artists to form a collaborative environment where multiple makers contribute to one shared narrative.
