

Longmont Braces Highlights Invisalign Clear Aligners as Modern Orthodontic Treatment Option

July 08, 2026

LONGMONT, CO - July 08, 2026 -

Longmont Braces, a Colorado-based orthodontic practice, continues to provide comprehensive information about Invisalign clear aligner therapy as part of its range of orthodontic services for teenagers and adults seeking alternatives to traditional braces.

The practice emphasizes the importance of individualized treatment planning when evaluating orthodontic options, noting that Invisalign uses a series of custom-made clear aligners to gradually move teeth into proper alignment. Treatment recommendations vary significantly depending on the complexity of each case and the specific outcomes desired by patients.

Invisalign treatment at Longmont Braces begins with a comprehensive evaluation to determine whether clear aligners are appropriate for a patient's particular orthodontic needs. The practice utilizes advanced 3D imaging and digital scanning technology to enhance diagnostic accuracy and create precise treatment plans tailored to individual requirements.

"Every patient presents unique orthodontic challenges and personal goals, which is why we customize our treatment recommendations based on thorough evaluation of their specific circumstances," said Dr. Stephanie Ross, orthodontist at Longmont Braces. "Clear aligner therapy has evolved significantly in recent years, allowing us to address a wider range of orthodontic issues than ever before, though traditional braces remain the optimal choice for certain complex cases."

The clear aligner system works through a sequence of removable, transparent trays that patients wear throughout the day and night, removing them only for eating, drinking, brushing, and flossing. Each set of aligners is worn for approximately one to two weeks before progressing to the next set in the series, with the total number of aligners and treatment duration determined by the complexity of tooth movement required.

Orthodontic practices have observed increasing interest in clear aligner therapy among both teenage and adult patients seeking less visible orthodontic solutions. The removable nature of the aligners offers practical advantages for maintaining oral hygiene and dietary flexibility compared to fixed appliances.

The practice notes that successful clear aligner treatment depends heavily on patient compliance with wearing instructions, as the aligners must be worn for 20 to 22 hours daily to achieve predicted tooth movements. Regular monitoring appointments allow orthodontists to track progress and make any necessary adjustments to the treatment plan.

Longmont Braces serves patients at two Colorado locations, offering both traditional braces and clear aligner options. The practice's orthodontic team, led by Dr. Ross and Dr. Aden Peterson, provides comprehensive orthodontic services including dentofacial orthopedics, surgical orthodontics, two-phase treatment, and temporary anchorage devices for complex cases.

Dr. Ross, a Longmont native and alumna of Niwot High School, completed specialized training in both traditional orthodontics and clear aligner therapy. The practice maintains a commitment to incorporating current orthodontic technologies and treatment methodologies while focusing on individualized patient care.

Longmont Braces continues to offer consultations for patients interested in exploring their orthodontic treatment options, including evaluation for clear aligner therapy suitability based on individual dental alignment needs and treatment goals.
