

Green Thumb Tree Specialists Explains Why Ottawa and Russell Homeowners Should Choose Arboriculture Canada-Trained Arborists Over General Tree Services

June 25, 2026

OTTAWA, ON - June 25, 2026 -

Green Thumb Tree Specialists is explaining why Ottawa and Russell homeowners seeking professional tree care should select contractors with Arboriculture Canada training credentials rather than general tree services that operate without recognized professional qualifications. The distinction between certified arborists and unlicensed tree services has direct consequences for the quality of work performed, the safety of the personnel conducting it, and the long-term health of the trees being managed.

Arboriculture Canada training programs establish a defined curriculum covering tree biology, pruning standards, hazard assessment, equipment operation, and compliance with WorkSafeBC and provincial safety standards. Arborists who complete that training have been evaluated against a consistent standard of knowledge rather than accumulating experience informally without external assessment. That distinction matters in a trade where incorrect pruning cuts, improper rigging techniques, and inadequate hazard identification can cause lasting damage to trees and pose safety risks to workers and surrounding property.

General tree services that operate without recognized credentials often compete on price, leading homeowners comparing quotes to inadvertently select a contractor whose lower cost reflects a lack of training, insurance coverage, or professional accountability rather than operational efficiency. The consequences of that selection typically emerge after the work is complete, when improper pruning produces die-back, when a tree removed without adequate rigging causes property damage, or when an uninsured contractor's injury results in liability exposure for the property owner.

"The difference between a trained arborist and a general tree service is not always visible in a quote or a website, but it becomes apparent in how the work is planned and executed," said Riley Sheldrick, Owner of Green Thumb Tree Specialists. "Arboriculture Canada training covers the standards that determine whether a tree is being pruned in a way that supports its long-term health or in a way that causes progressive decline. Homeowners who understand that distinction make better decisions about who they hire.?

Green Thumb Tree Specialists holds an ISA Certified Arborist designation and employs Ottawa ISA-certified arborist-trained practitioners for all tree assessment, pruning, and removal work across its service area. The ISA Certified Arborist credential is recognized across North America and requires ongoing continuing education to maintain, ensuring that credential holders remain current with evolving standards in tree care practice. That ongoing education requirement distinguishes the credential from a one-time certification that does not reflect continued professional development.

The company serves residential and commercial clients across Ottawa and Russell, with its Orleans tree services coverage extending to east Ottawa communities, where suburban development along the Ottawa River corridor creates consistent demand for professional tree care. Properties in Orleans and the surrounding communities frequently include mature trees that require periodic assessment, structural pruning, and, in some cases, risk management interventions that require the judgment of a trained arborist rather than a general labourer with a chainsaw.

The Ottawa region's urban and suburban tree canopy faces ongoing pressure from invasive pests, climate-related stress, and the physical demands of trees growing in compacted urban soils with limited root-zone access. Managing those pressures effectively requires species knowledge and diagnostic skills that Arboriculture Canada training specifically addresses. For homeowners invested in maintaining mature trees on their properties, selecting a trained and certified arborist is the primary way to ensure care decisions are based on professional judgment rather than guesswork.
