FRANKLIN, TN - June 24, 2026 - PRESSADVANTAGE -

Harpeth Decks, a custom deck and outdoor living builder based in Franklin, Tennessee, specializes in composite deck construction and holds manufacturer certifications with four composite decking companies. Founded by owner Daniel Jones, the company designs and installs decks, porches, and outdoor living spaces for homeowners across Williamson County and the greater Nashville area, with composite construction forming the core of its work.

Jones, who was born and raised in Franklin, started the company in 2019. He entered the business with hands-on experience across installation, design, and project management, and his early work in the building trades developed into a focus on decks and outdoor living spaces. He holds a dual degree in business management and marketing from the University of Tennessee at Martin. The company is owner-led, with a small in-house team supported by trade subcontractors, and its work emphasizes structural integrity, material quality, and precision through each phase of a project, from initial measurements through framing and finish work.

Composite decking, the company's core material category, is produced from a combination of wood fibers and recycled plastics and is engineered to resist moisture, fading, and surface staining. Unlike traditional wood decking, composite boards do not require the periodic sealing or refinishing associated with natural lumber, which is one reason the material has seen wider use across the humid Middle Tennessee climate. Material selection is a central part of the company's process. Jones evaluates products across manufacturers including Trex, TimberTech, Deckorators, and Fiberon to identify the system suited to a given project's requirements, budget, and design, rather than working from a single product line. Each new build begins with a 3D design step that allows homeowners to review the layout, materials, and finishes of a completed project before construction starts, and to make adjustments during the design phase.

Harpeth Decks holds platinum and pro-level certifications with four composite decking manufacturers. The company is a TrexPro Platinum contractor, the top tier of the Trex professional program for composite decking and railing; a TimberTech Pro contractor, certified for TimberTech composite decking, railing, and trim systems; a Deckorators Pro contractor, certified for Deckorators composite decking, aluminum railing, and post cap accessories; and a Fiberon Pro contractor, certified for Fiberon composite decking and railing. Each certification reflects a volume of completed work with the manufacturer and the technical training required to install its systems to specification.

The company handles new construction and maintenance within one operation. New construction centers on composite decks built with Trex, TimberTech, Deckorators, and Fiberon materials, and includes pool decks, covered and screened-in porches, pergolas, gazebos, patios with fire pit integration, outdoor kitchens, and metal deck frame systems. For homeowners who prefer natural wood, the company also builds in pressure-treated pine and IPE hardwood.

On the maintenance side, the company performs deck repair, cleaning, sealing, staining, refinishing, and full restoration for structures showing weathering or wear, and installs deck railing and lighting across composite and metal profiles. It also performs deck safety inspections, which provide an independent structural assessment of an existing deck.

Harpeth Decks provides a lifetime workmanship warranty on its installations. On qualifying Trex composite systems, manufacturer material warranties range from 25 to 50 years depending on the boards selected.

The company operates from a Franklin office and serves Williamson County and the surrounding Middle Tennessee region, including Brentwood, Nolensville, Spring Hill, Thompson's Station, College Grove, Arrington, Forest Hills, and Belle Meade, among other communities. It also maintains a second location in Nashville, extending its service area into Davidson County.
