

North Decks and Outdoor Living Earns Four Decking Certifications

June 25, 2026

CONCORD, NC - June 25, 2026 -

The Concord company now holds two manufacturer certifications and two NADRA program credentials covering composite decking installation and construction standards.

North Decks and Outdoor Living, a family-owned residential and commercial deck builder and outdoor living company, has earned four active industry certifications covering composite decking installation and professional construction standards. Based in Concord, the company designs and builds custom decks, pergolas, porches, patios, and outdoor living spaces for homeowners and businesses across seven North Carolina counties in the greater Charlotte area.

The four credentials include TimberTech Silver Pro, a certified-installer designation for TimberTech by AZEK composite decking, railing, and trim systems, and TrexPro, a certified-installer designation for Trex composite decking and railing products. The company also holds two credentials from the North American Deck and Railing Association. The first, NADRA Certified for Deck Evaluation and Inspection, covers assessing the safety and condition of existing decks. The second, NADRA Certified for Decks Done Right, covers current construction standards for new builds. Together, the designations document both manufacturer training and third-party accountability behind the company's composite decking work, and they give homeowners a way to verify a contractor's qualifications before committing to a project.

North Decks and Outdoor Living was founded by owner Tyler North following a career in paramedicine. According to the company, the discipline of working under pressure and delivering precise outcomes shapes its approach to design and construction, where framing and foundation decisions can affect a structure for years. That approach extends across each project, from the initial 3D design session through permit acquisition, foundation installation, and the final walkthrough. The company says the same standard guides how it documents each build and communicates with property owners during construction. Tyler North, owner of North Decks and Outdoor Living, said the certifications give homeowners "an added layer of verification when choosing a contractor for a long-term outdoor investment."

The company specializes in composite and PVC decking and works with composite brands that include Trex, TimberTech by AZEK, and Fiberon. Its broader material range also covers wood decking in pressure-treated, cedar, and exotic hardwood profiles such as Ipe, Tigerwood, and Cumaru. Framing options include wood, steel, aluminum, and composite systems, with foundations set on helical piers or traditional concrete footings. Deck designs range from platform and multi-level builds to raised, freestanding, screened, and poolside configurations, with underdeck drainage systems and low-voltage lighting available through In-Lite and Trex. The company notes that material and framing choices are matched to each property and to how the finished space will be used.

Beyond decking, North Decks and Outdoor Living builds pergolas, including Azenco and Struxure louvered systems, along with covered and screened porches, concrete and stone patios, privacy structures, and outdoor living features such as firepits, outdoor kitchens, pavilions, and gazebos. The company also provides deck maintenance, repair, and replacement for existing structures. Its work is backed by a one-year workmanship warranty, a five-year structural warranty, and material warranties of up to 50 years on qualifying systems, terms the company says reflect its focus on long-term durability in the North Carolina climate.

North Decks and Outdoor Living operates as a licensed North Carolina general contractor under license number L.102566 and coordinates all project work from its Concord headquarters. The company serves property owners across Cabarrus, Mecklenburg, Rowan, Iredell, Gaston, Lincoln, and Stanly counties throughout the greater Charlotte area.
