

Go To Guy Home Services Earns 2024 NADRA Deck Building Award

June 25, 2026

ATLANTA, GA - June 25, 2026 -

Go To Guy Home Services, a custom deck builder owned and operated by Kelly Crow, has been named a 2024 award winner in the national deck competition held by the North American Deck and Railing Association (NADRA), recognized for its custom wood deck work. The company received the recognition for a project completed for homeowners in the Atlanta area, where it has built more than 300 custom decks and outdoor living spaces.

The NADRA competition recognizes deck builders across the United States for design and construction in categories that include wood, composite, and specialty decks. For Go To Guy Home Services, the award reflects a focus on custom residential deck construction that the company has maintained since it was founded by Kelly Crow, who personally leads each build.

Crow brings more than 40 years of experience in design and home construction to the company and operates on an owner-led model. Under that approach, the same person guides a project from the initial consultation through the final walkthrough, rather than transferring the work to separate crews at each stage. The company serves homeowners across Atlanta and the surrounding metropolitan communities.

Go To Guy Home Services specializes in custom residential decks, ranging from single-level platforms to multi-level, raised, and screened designs. Each project follows a defined process that includes design consultation, three-dimensional deck modeling, permit acquisition, foundation work, framing, construction, and final finishing. The company also designs related outdoor living structures, such as pergolas, covered and screened porches, and underdeck systems, as extensions of its core deck work.

Projects are built with a range of materials selected to match each homeowner's design goals and the demands of the regional climate, including pressure-treated wood, cedar, exotic hardwoods, composite, and PVC decking. Steel and aluminum framing are available for builds that call for additional structural performance, and railings are offered in materials that include wood, composite, and aluminum, along with integrated deck lighting.

Alongside the 2024 award, the company holds a range of manufacturer and industry certifications. Go To Guy Home Services is a Deckorators Certified Pro and holds certifications associated with Regal Ideas, Bold, and Fortress. Kelly Crow also serves as a NADRA Deck Safety Ambassador and holds the NADRA Decks Done Right certification, a program centered on building decks to current safety and code standards.

The company works with established decking and railing manufacturers, including Trex, TimberTech by AZEK, Fiberon, Deckorators, and Fortress Building Products, and integrates compatible framing and lighting systems within those product categories.

Beyond industry recognition, Go To Guy Home Services has been acknowledged within its local community, having been voted a Nextdoor Neighborhood Favorite in 2021, 2023, and 2024.

Completed projects are backed by a five-year craftsmanship warranty, with manufacturer material warranties of up to 50 years depending on the products selected. Design consultations and three-dimensional renderings are provided as part of the company's planning process, allowing homeowners to review a project before construction begins. The company handles permit acquisition and required inspections as part of each build.

"Building decks in Atlanta is about more than carpentry. It is about creating outdoor spaces where families gather, relax, and make memories," said Kelly Crow, founder and owner of Go To Guy Home Services. "Clients work directly with the same person who designs and builds their deck, and that hands-on standard is the foundation the company was built on."
