April 29, 2016 -

CENTRALIA, Wash., April 27, 2016? Express Employment Professionals just revealed fresh survey results exposing the escalating difficulty that employers face when striving to recruit and fill positions. Employment agencies in Centralia, WA have noticed these changes and begun taking action to help build their community.

The final results emerged from a survey of 340 companies. Contributors were asked, "Currently, how easy is it for you to recruit and fill positions?"

Only three percent said "very easy," while 29 percent said "somewhat easy." About half, 49 percent, said "somewhat difficult," 16 percent said "very difficult," and an additional three percent said, "I don't know."

More participants said "very difficult" or "somewhat difficult" (65 percent) in this specific survey than in any of the four hiring trends surveys conducted by Express in 2015. The development in reported difficulty corresponds with the fall in the unemployment rate.

?Our market has been noticing these changes and growing to make adjustments to better suit the community,? said Matthew Rice-Swena, branch manager of the Centralia Express office. ?We work closely with our clients and job seekers to continue to provide jobs in Centralia, WA.?

The survey of 340 businesses, which are current and past clients of Express Employment Professionals, covers hiring patterns for the first quarter of 2016.
