Hemlock Contracting Earns Dual Trex and TimberTech Certifications

June 25, 2026

WORCESTER, MA - June 25, 2026 -
Hemlock Contracting, a family-owned construction company, has announced that it now holds composite decking certification from both Trex and TimberTech, earning Trex Platinum Installer status and TimberTech Gold Pro status as it expands its deck and outdoor living operations across offices in Worcester and Woburn, Massachusetts, and Hartford, Connecticut.

Each certification is granted to installers that meet the manufacturer's requirements for training, annual recertification, project volume, and inspected workmanship. Carrying both credentials means the company installs and warranties product lines from two manufacturers rather than one, which allows material recommendations to be based on a project's requirements rather than a single brand relationship. Both manufacturers provide warranty backing on their products when the work is completed by a certified contractor.

The certifications accompany the company's expansion to three offices. Hemlock Contracting operates from its headquarters at 24 Everard St in Worcester, with additional offices at 1042 Main St in Woburn, Massachusetts, and 90 Margarita Dr in Hartford, Connecticut. The three locations give the company coverage across central Massachusetts, the greater Boston and North Shore area, and Hartford County in Connecticut. The company was founded in 2012 and reports more than 10,000 completed projects across residential and commercial construction. It is licensed and insured and holds A+ accreditation from the Better Business Bureau.

Hemlock Contracting works primarily as a deck, porch, and outdoor living contractor. It builds custom residential and commercial decks in configurations that include platform, raised, multi-level, freestanding, rooftop, and covered designs, along with covered and screened porches, three-season rooms, sunrooms, and patios. Commercial work has included rooftop decks on multi-family buildings. Recent residential projects have spanned new deck construction, deck replacements, poolside decks, screened and three-season porches, and home additions. "We started in general contracting, and over time we settled into decks, porches, and outdoor living as our focus," said Teddy Labonte, owner of Hemlock Contracting. "Carrying certification from both Trex and TimberTech lets us match the material to the project and the homeowner, rather than the other way around."

Alongside its decking work, the company provides the construction services that deck and porch projects often require. These include asphalt roof replacement, vinyl, cedar, and fiber cement siding, gutter installation, custom roof structures, and home additions. According to the company, handling those trades in-house allows one contractor to coordinate work that might otherwise be divided among several, which it says reduces the scheduling gaps that can occur when a deck project is combined with other exterior work on an older home.

The materials the company offers for decks include pressure-treated and cedar wood, exotic hardwoods, composite, and PVC, with composite lines supplied by Trex, TimberTech, and Deckorators. The company also installs deck railings, deck lighting, and underdeck drainage systems, and it sets decks, porches, and structures on helical pier or concrete footings depending on site conditions. Projects move from design and consultation through permitting, framing, and construction, with the company managing each phase from start to finish.

"Our goal is for our name to be associated with quality work and with clear communication before, during, and after a project," Labonte said. The company reports that it backs its work with manufacturer warranties on specified products and provides workmanship coverage on its installations.

Hemlock Contracting LLC, which also operates under the registered name Hemlock Decks Porches and Home Additions, is a family-owned, full-service construction company led by owner Teddy Labonte. The company specializes in custom decks, porches, and outdoor living spaces and also provides roofing, siding, custom roof structures, and home additions for homeowners across central Massachusetts, the greater Boston area, and the Hartford, Connecticut region.
