

The Light System Donates TLS Chair to Support Veterans at Atlas Clinics Pompano Beach

July 02, 2026

Miami, Florida - July 02, 2026 -

Veterans participating in the Privet Care veteran wellness program at Atlas Clinics Pompano Beach now have access to The Light System Chair, following a donation from The Light System aimed at expanding non-invasive wellness resources for those who have served in the United States military.

The TLS Chair has been incorporated into the clinic's veteran care program, where it is used alongside existing wellness services to support individualized care plans tailored to each veteran's unique goals and needs. The addition reflects a shared commitment between The Light System and Atlas Clinics Pompano Beach to make innovative wellness technologies more accessible to the veteran community.

For many veterans, wellness goals can vary significantly, ranging from improving mobility and recovery to reducing stress and enhancing overall quality of life. Atlas Clinics Pompano Beach takes a personalized approach to care, working closely with each individual to develop customized wellness plans designed to support their specific objectives.

According to Dr. Dan Husley, a veteran and leader within the Privet Care veteran wellness program, the addition of The Light System Chair has enhanced the clinic's ability to offer a broader range of wellness resources to those it serves.

"The Light System Chair has become an important part of our veteran wellness program and has been incorporated into individualized care plans based on each veteran's unique needs and goals," said Dr. Husley. "We use it alongside our existing services, including upper cervical chiropractic care, Hyperbaric Oxygen Therapy (HBOT), PEMF therapy, and spinal decompression therapy, to provide a more comprehensive approach to wellness and recovery."

The chair serves as an additional non-invasive wellness resource within the program, giving veterans access to technology that many users describe as relaxing, refreshing, and restorative. The goal is not to replace traditional healthcare but to complement existing wellness efforts by providing additional tools that support overall well-being.

For The Light System, the opportunity to contribute to a veteran-focused initiative aligned closely with the company's mission of making wellness technologies more accessible to people who can benefit from them.

"The opportunity to give back to the veteran community was one that we simply could not pass up," said Jarrod Barakett, President of The Light System. "This is a community that has sacrificed so much in service to our country. It means the world to us as a company to be in a position where we can give back in a meaningful way. Our mission has always been centered around helping people access innovative wellness technologies, and we're honored to help make those resources available to the men and women who have given so much for others."

The partnership highlights a growing trend in wellness care, where private companies and community-based organizations are working together to expand access to supportive resources outside of traditional treatment settings. By integrating innovative technologies into existing programs, organizations are creating additional opportunities for veterans to explore wellness solutions that fit their individual needs and lifestyles.

At Atlas Clinics Pompano Beach, that commitment extends beyond the technologies themselves. The clinic strives to provide an environment where veterans feel welcomed, respected, and supported throughout their wellness journey. Providers emphasize education, individualized attention, and access to resources that empower veterans to take an active role in their overall health and well-being.

As veteran wellness programs continue to evolve, partnerships like this one demonstrate how collaboration can help broaden access to supportive services while recognizing the sacrifices made by those who have served. For the veterans participating in the Privet Care program, the addition of The Light System Chair represents another resource available to support their pursuit of improved wellness, recovery, and quality of life.
