All Pro Newton Deck Builders Announces Service Area Expansion to Dedham

August 04, 2026

NEWTON, MA - August 04, 2026 -
All Pro Newton Deck Builders, a Massachusetts deck construction contractor based in Newton, has expanded its residential service coverage to include the town of Dedham. The expansion, effective this month, gives Dedham homeowners direct access to the firm's deck design, permitting, installation, and repair operations under the same regional service structure previously extended to Newton and adjacent communities.

Dedham, situated in Norfolk County approximately ten miles southwest of Boston, sits adjacent to the company's established coverage area and along the western reaches of the greater Boston metropolitan region. The town, home to roughly 25,000 residents, contains a substantial base of single-family residential properties, many of which feature older housing stock common to deck retrofit and replacement projects.

The expansion follows a period of sustained demand for outdoor residential construction across eastern Massachusetts, driven in part by higher rates of at-home entertaining and continued homeowner investment in exterior improvements. Industry data published by the National Association of Home Builders in recent years has identified decks and outdoor living structures as high-demand renovation categories in the Northeast, with regional contractors reporting multi-month project backlogs during peak seasons.

Under the expanded footprint, the firm will handle projects in Dedham ranging from smaller ground-level platforms to multi-tier structures featuring railings, integrated lighting, built-in seating, and privacy screens. Materials used on projects include pressure-treated lumber, cedar, mahogany, and composite decking supplied by manufacturers such as Trex and TimberTech, with material selection determined by client budget, exposure conditions, and expected long-term use.

"The addition of Dedham to the service area reflects steady inquiry volume from Norfolk County property owners over the past two seasons," said John Greene, Owner of All Pro Newton Deck Builders. "Dedham homeowners now have access to a full-service local contractor handling deck design, town permitting support, and construction from initial consultation through final inspection."

The Dedham expansion is being handled through the firm's existing operational structure rather than through a new physical location, with dispatch coordinated from the company's established base of operations. This approach allows the company to extend coverage without additional overhead, a model that has become common among regional specialty contractors managing service-area growth.

Deck consultations begin with an on-site assessment of yard conditions, sun exposure, existing patio or landscape elements, and access points from the home. From that assessment, the firm develops a design proposal that includes framing plans, decking layouts, railing configurations, and material specifications, followed by a written price estimate that clients review before any contract is signed.

Deck construction projects in Massachusetts require building permits issued by the municipal building department and must comply with state building code provisions governing footing depth, ledger board attachment, guardrail height, and structural load capacity. The firm will coordinate directly with the Dedham Building Division on permit applications, inspection scheduling, and code compliance documentation on behalf of property owners.

Massachusetts building code provisions for residential decks have evolved in recent code cycles to address ledger connections, footing depth, guardrail load requirements, and lateral load resistance. Compliance with the current provisions is a routine part of residential deck permitting statewide, and the firm's project scope for Dedham clients will include verification of code-current design specifications at the plan review stage.

Projects in Dedham will be scheduled alongside ongoing work in Newton, Wellesley, Needham, Brookline, Waltham, and other communities in the surrounding region. Lead times for new deck construction vary based on season, material availability, and permit turnaround, with peak-season projects typically requiring several weeks between contract signing and construction start.

Timing of the expansion coincides with the pre-summer scheduling window, when eastern Massachusetts homeowners initiate outdoor construction contracts for completion before autumn. Deck construction activity in the region concentrates from late spring through early fall, and contractors serving the Boston metropolitan area typically fill summer schedules by mid-spring.
