

Box Tree Care Emphasizes Oak Wilt Treatment Services as Central Texas Faces Seasonal Disease Threats

July 08, 2026

LEANDER, TX - July 08, 2026 -
Box Tree Care, a Leander-based tree service company, is reminding property owners about the critical importance of early oak wilt detection and treatment as the disease continues to spread throughout Central Texas communities. The company reports increased inquiries about oak wilt symptoms and prevention methods as residents become more aware of the devastating impact this fungal disease can have on their oak trees.

Oak wilt, caused by the fungus Bretziella fagacearum, has been steadily advancing through Texas oak populations, killing thousands of trees annually. The disease spreads through root grafts between trees and through sap-feeding beetles attracted to fresh wounds on oak trees. Once infected, red oaks can die within weeks, while white oaks may survive for years with proper treatment.

Box Tree Care provides comprehensive oak wilt treatment services, including fungicide injections and strategic pruning of infected branches. The company's certified arborists assess each tree individually to determine the most effective treatment approach based on the disease's progression and the tree's overall health condition.

"Oak wilt represents one of the most serious threats to oak trees in Central Texas, and early intervention makes all the difference in saving affected trees," said Josh Box, owner of Box Tree Care. "We're seeing more property owners taking proactive steps to protect their oaks, especially after witnessing the rapid decline of untreated trees in neighboring properties. The key is recognizing the symptoms early and implementing treatment before the disease progresses too far."

The company's approach to oak wilt management extends beyond treatment to include preventive measures. Their team educates clients about proper pruning timing, wound dressing applications, and the importance of avoiding tree injuries during the peak beetle activity period from February through June.

Beyond oak wilt treatment, Box Tree Care offers comprehensive tree care services throughout the Leander area. Their Tree Trimming Service helps reduce the risk of falling branches that could pose hazards to people and property during storms or adverse weather conditions. The company's skilled professionals understand the growth patterns of different tree species and trim them in ways that promote healthy growth while maintaining structural integrity.

The company also provides tree removal services for trees that pose significant risks due to disease, unstable growth patterns, or other factors. Additional services include stump grinding, which efficiently removes remaining stumps after tree removal, and lot clearing for residential and commercial development projects.

Box Tree Care distinguishes itself through its commitment to using the latest arboricultural techniques and equipment. The company's team of experienced arborists stays current with industry best practices and emerging treatment methods to ensure optimal outcomes for their clients' trees.

Founded by Joshua Box, the company has built its reputation on delivering professional tree care services while prioritizing customer satisfaction. The company offers free consultations, providing property owners with expert assessments from experienced arborists who can identify potential issues before they become costly problems.

As Central Texas continues to experience urban growth and environmental challenges, professional tree care becomes increasingly important for maintaining healthy urban forests and protecting property values. Box Tree Care remains dedicated to helping property owners preserve their trees through proper maintenance and timely intervention when diseases like oak wilt threaten their landscape investments.
