

RestoPros of Knoxville Publishes Report Detailing National Fire and Smoke Damage Statistics

August 20, 2026

KNOXVILLE, TN - August 20, 2026 -

RestoPros of Knoxville has released a new data-driven report examining the scope of fire and smoke damage affecting homes across the United States. The report compiles national findings that show more than 329,500 structure fires occur every year, causing nearly 4,000 deaths and over 11 billion dollars in property damage annually.

The report gathers fire and smoke damage facts and statistics from national sources to help property owners understand the risks fires pose and the urgency required in the aftermath. Beyond the immediate destruction of flames, the report highlights that toxic chemical exposure can linger long after a fire is extinguished. Smoke residue often contains carbon monoxide, fine particulate matter, and dozens of harmful chemicals that continue to affect indoor air quality and building materials.

A central theme of the report is the importance of time. The findings emphasize that every minute matters during a house fire and the hours that follow, as soot, smoke residue, and water from firefighting efforts can cause secondary damage that compounds the original loss. Delays in response frequently lead to permanent staining, corrosion, and persistent odors that become far more difficult to address.

The report also examines the financial dimension of fire loss, noting that fire damage produces among the most expensive categories of homeowners insurance claims. This reality, the report notes, makes prompt and thorough restoration essential to limiting both structural and financial harm.

"The numbers reflect how devastating and fast-moving a fire can be, and how much damage continues after the flames are gone," said Greg Kendig, spokesperson for RestoPros of Knoxville. "The goal of this report is to give property owners a clear understanding of what they are facing and why the first hours after a fire are so critical."

"Restoration after a fire involves far more than removing visible damage," Kendig added. "It requires addressing water from firefighting efforts, eliminating embedded odors, and treating hidden residue. A full-scope approach protects both the property and the people who live or work in it."
