Kitchen Countertop Fabricator Expands Service Area to Additional Nearby Communities

July 08, 2026

Cumming, Georgia - July 08, 2026 -
Atlanta Stone Creations, a countertop fabrication and installation company serving homeowners and contractors throughout the greater Atlanta region, has announced an expansion of its kitchen countertop services to several nearby communities. The move extends the company's fabrication, template, and installation capabilities into surrounding neighborhoods that have seen increased residential renovation activity over the past year.

The expansion adds service coverage across suburbs bordering the company's existing operational footprint, allowing homeowners in these areas to access the same natural stone and engineered surface offerings previously available to residents within the previous service radius. Company representatives confirmed that the expanded service area became active this quarter, with scheduling now open for consultations, in-home measurements, and installation appointments in the newly covered zip codes.

According to company leadership, the decision to expand followed a steady increase in inbound requests from homeowners located just outside the previous service radius. Many of those requests came from residents undertaking mid-scale kitchen remodels who were seeking local fabricators with in-house template and installation teams rather than working through distant suppliers or retail intermediaries. The expansion is intended to reduce lead times for those customers and provide a more direct point of contact from initial slab selection through final installation.

Kitchen countertops remain among the more frequently requested renovation upgrades in the regional housing market. Industry data from the National Kitchen and Bath Association has placed countertop replacement among the more common remodeling categories by both frequency and homeowner spending, reflecting the surface's role in kitchen aesthetics, workflow, and long-term durability. The expanded reach positions the company to serve a broader portion of that ongoing demand.

The company's core kitchen countertop offering includes fabrication and installation of natural stone materials such as granite, marble, and quartzite, as well as engineered surfaces such as quartz and porcelain. Each project typically begins with a slab selection appointment, followed by a digital template of the existing kitchen layout, fabrication in the company's facility, and installation by trained technicians. The expansion carries this workflow into the newly added service areas without modification to the standard process.

Alongside the expanded coverage, the company has updated several elements of its service delivery. Digital templating technology, which uses laser measurement to create accurate layouts of a customer's kitchen before fabrication, has been updated to reduce turnaround time between measurement and installation. Slab viewing appointments have also been restructured to give homeowners additional time with individual pieces before committing to a selection, addressing a common concern among renovators who want to see the specific stone that will be installed in their home rather than a sample or representative photograph.

Edge profile options, backsplash coordination, and undermount sink cutouts remain part of the standard scope of work. Customers in the newly served communities will have access to the same range of finish options, including polished, honed, and leathered treatments, that has been available to existing customers.

David Rodriguez, owner of Atlanta Stone Creations, commented on the expansion. "The demand from homeowners in these surrounding communities has been building for some time, and extending service coverage was the logical next step for the business," Rodriguez said. "The goal has always been to give homeowners direct access to a fabricator who can walk them through slab selection, handle the template, and complete the installation without a chain of middlemen. Bringing that same experience to more neighborhoods across the metro area is something the team has been preparing for throughout the year."

Rodriguez added that the expansion does not alter the company's approach to pricing or project timelines. Quotes will continue to be provided after in-home measurement rather than through fixed estimates, and installation windows will be scheduled based on fabrication capacity.

The expanded service footprint comes at a time of sustained activity in the regional residential renovation market. Housing data compiled by regional analysts has shown continued interest in kitchen and bathroom upgrades among homeowners choosing to renovate existing properties rather than relocate. Countertop replacement, often paired with cabinet refacing or full cabinetry replacement, has featured in that trend.

Contractors and interior designers working in the newly covered communities will also be able to access the company's trade services, including bulk slab coordination for multi-unit residential projects and scheduled installation timelines for builders working on new construction. Company representatives noted that trade accounts in the expanded areas can be established through the same intake process used for existing partners.

Consultations for kitchen countertop projects in the newly covered areas can now be scheduled directly through the company. Atlanta Stone Creations operates from its facility in the Atlanta metropolitan area and serves residential and commercial customers throughout the region. The company specializes in the fabrication and installation of natural stone and engineered surfaces for kitchens, bathrooms, and commercial spaces, with a focus on in-house production and direct service to homeowners.
