

Danville Music Highlights Music Lessons and Rentals for Danville Students as School Year Begins

August 17, 2026

Danville, California - August 17, 2026 -

Danville Music, a full-service musical instrument store, lesson studio, and repair shop founded in 1989, is highlighting its band and orchestra offerings as students across the Tri-Valley return to school this fall. The store, which has served Danville, San Ramon, Walnut Creek, Pleasanton, and surrounding communities for more than three decades, is directing attention to the resources it provides for young musicians entering school music programs.

Each year the back-to-school season brings a wave of students seeking instruments for band and orchestra classes. To meet that seasonal demand, Danville Music band and orchestra instrument rentals feature a full Yamaha line of woodwind, brass, and string instruments, available to rent or buy. Rental instruments are name-brand and maintained to a high standard, with used instruments professionally refurbished, play-tested, cleaned, and guaranteed to be in playable condition. The store applies the first twelve months of rent toward the purchase of a rented instrument and covers basic wear-and-tear repairs during the rental period.

Beyond rentals, the store provides private music lessons across guitar, piano, and band and orchestral instruments, taught by an experienced teaching staff. Its in-house repair department, staffed by experienced luthiers, offers instrument repair services and free lifetime adjustments on instruments purchased from the store. Danville Music, located in Danville, California, and online at danvillemusic.com, supports school music programs throughout the Tri-Valley region.

"The start of the school year is when families first walk through the door looking for a way to get their child started in band or orchestra," said Adam Schuman, co-owner of Danville Music. "Having served this community since 1989, the store understands what school programs need, and works to make sure every student has an instrument in hand and a place to learn how to play it."

The store notes that many parents face the choice between renting and buying a first instrument. Its rental program is structured around a three-month commitment to learning, giving students time to develop before a family decides whether to continue. That approach reflects the store's long-standing relationship with local music educators and its familiarity with the needs of students in Danville, San Ramon, Walnut Creek, and Pleasanton.

Schuman added that the store's combination of sales, rentals, lessons, and repair under one roof allows families to manage a student's musical needs in a single location. "A student can rent an instrument, take lessons, and bring that same instrument back for service, all in one place," he said. "That continuity matters during the school year, when a broken reed or a needed adjustment can mean missing a rehearsal."

Danville Music continues to serve as a resource for the region's student musicians and their families as another academic year begins.

Danville Music is a musical instrument store, lesson studio, and repair shop located in the San Francisco Bay Area. Founded in 1989 and owned by Adam Schuman and Cameron Brochier, the store offers guitars, basses, amplifiers, effects, drums, ukuleles, microphones, and band and orchestra instruments, along with rentals, lessons, and repair services. The store serves Danville, San Ramon, Walnut Creek, Pleasanton, and surrounding Tri-Valley communities.
