

SplitSimple Continues Annual Social Work Scholarship Supporting Future Family Advocates

July 27, 2026

Denver, Colorado - July 27, 2026 -

SplitSimple, a divorce mediation services provider operating in Denver, has announced the continuation of its annual scholarship program designed to support students pursuing careers in social work. The scholarship recognizes the important role social workers play in helping individuals and families navigate life's challenges, including divorce and separation.

The scholarship program reflects SplitSimple's commitment to supporting the next generation of professionals who provide essential guidance and resources to families during times of transition. Through this annual initiative, the company seeks to encourage students who are preparing for careers dedicated to strengthening individuals, families, and communities.

"Social workers are often the unsung heroes who help families navigate some of their most challenging moments," said Chris Griffith, founder of SplitSimple. "Through this scholarship, we hope to support students who share our commitment to helping families find constructive paths forward during times of transition. The work these future professionals will do extends far beyond what we accomplish through divorce mediation, touching lives across communities in countless ways.?

The scholarship initiative aligns with SplitSimple's broader mission of helping families resolve conflict through respectful communication and collaboration. Social workers frequently assist individuals and families experiencing separation or divorce by connecting them with counseling, community resources, and other support services. By supporting students entering the profession, SplitSimple hopes to contribute to the continued availability of skilled professionals who help families during periods of change.

Applicants are selected according to the scholarship program's published eligibility requirements and application guidelines. Through the program, SplitSimple aims to recognize students who demonstrate a commitment to serving others and making a positive impact through the field of social work.

The relationship between social work and family mediation highlights the value of a comprehensive support system for families experiencing significant life changes. While mediators help couples work toward mutually acceptable agreements, social workers often provide additional emotional support, advocacy, and access to community resources that can help families adapt to new circumstances.

SplitSimple specializes in divorce mediation services that help couples reach mutually acceptable agreements without the adversarial nature often associated with traditional litigation. The company offers remote mediation sessions, allowing clients to participate from the comfort of their homes while working through important decisions involving asset division, child support and parenting arrangements, financial matters, and other aspects of the divorce process. Its services also include uncontested divorce proceedings, alimony, equitable division of assets, no-fault divorce cases, prenuptial agreements, and preparation and filing of required legal documents.

The company's collaborative approach helps clients reach agreements that can be submitted to the court for approval while minimizing conflict, reducing emotional stress, and encouraging productive communication throughout the mediation process. By offering an alternative to traditional divorce litigation, SplitSimple helps families move forward with dignity and respect while preserving important relationships, particularly when children are involved.
