

Deck It Receives 2025 TimberTech Contractor Award

July 14, 2026

BOLTON, MA - July 14, 2026 -

Deck It, a composite decking company based in Bolton, Massachusetts, has been recognized by TimberTech as a Top Contractor in the Northeast for 2025. The recognition reflects the company's installation record and manufacturer training in composite decking systems as the summer building season begins.

TimberTech's contractor recognition is based on factors that can include installation volume, ongoing product certification, and adherence to manufacturer installation standards. Programs of this kind are used by decking manufacturers to identify installers who complete brand-specific training and maintain consistent build quality across projects. Deck It also holds Trex Pro Platinum installer status and belongs to the North American Deck and Railing Association, an industry group that sets standards for deck construction and safety.

The company specializes in composite and PVC deck construction for residential and commercial properties, building primarily with Trex and TimberTech by Azek materials. Its projects cover design, framing, permitting, and full build-out, along with railings, lighting, skirting, and under-deck drainage systems.

Composite decking has continued to gain share in the outdoor living market for its durability and lower maintenance compared with traditional wood. Products from Trex and TimberTech are engineered to resist fading, staining, and surface wear in changing New England conditions, and manufacturer-certified installation can affect the level of material warranty coverage available to homeowners. Certification programs generally require installers to follow specified fastening, spacing, and structural methods, which are also among the criteria manufacturers weigh when extending their longer material warranties.

"Earning this recognition reflects the standard our crews hold on every build," said Allyssa Verge, manager at Deck It. "We work only in composite and PVC decking so homeowners get a durable, low-maintenance result along with the manufacturer warranty that comes with certified installation. Recognition from a manufacturer like TimberTech tells homeowners the work has been reviewed against a consistent benchmark, not just completed."

Deck It manages projects from initial 3D design through permitting and construction. The 3D design stage allows homeowners to review layout, materials, and configuration before work begins, and the company handles permit acquisition as part of each build. Decks are built in a range of configurations, including platform, raised, multi-level, freestanding, pool, and covered designs, and structures are set on helical piers or concrete footings depending on site conditions. Permit requirements for residential decks vary by municipality, and the company coordinates the necessary approvals with local building departments before construction begins.

Framing is available in wood, aluminum, composite, and pressure-treated materials, and finishing options include composite, aluminum, and cable railing systems, integrated deck lighting, and skirting. The company also builds dry, usable space beneath elevated decks using under-deck drainage systems from Trex and TimberTech.

Beyond new construction, the company builds porches, screened-in porches, three-season rooms, and sunrooms, and provides deck repair, inspection, resurfacing, and remodeling for existing structures. It reports having completed more than 500 deck projects in the region to date.

Deck It serves Bolton and the surrounding Central Massachusetts region. The company offers a labor warranty on its installations alongside the manufacturer material warranties carried by the Trex and TimberTech products it uses. Homeowners planning projects for the warmer months typically begin the design and permitting process weeks in advance, since construction schedules fill through the spring and summer season.
