

Camp Social Opens 2027 Waitlist for Women-Only Adult Summer Camp Experience

August 11, 2026

New York, New York - August 11, 2026 -

Camp Social, a women's-only sleepaway retreat set on a lakeside property in Equinunk, Pennsylvania, has opened its waitlist for prospective campers seeking to be first in line when 2027 dates are released. The three-day experience invites women to step away from daily routines, reconnect with nature and rediscover the simple joys of summer camp through classic activities reimagined for adults.

The adult summer camp centers on genuine connection. Many attendees arrive on their own, and the format is designed to make solo campers feel welcome from the moment they step off the bus. Shared cabins, group activities and communal meals create natural opportunities for women to meet new people and build lasting friendships in a supportive environment away from screens and schedules.

Programming blends nostalgia with modern wellness. Campers can try archery, arts and crafts, tie-dye, friendship bracelets, pickleball and ropes courses, or take part in morning yoga, lake dips, guided hikes, meditation, body sculpt sessions and a book club. Evenings bring fireside s'mores and gatherings under the stars. Accommodation consists of cozy lakeside cabins, with private rooms available, and all meals, snacks and drinks are included throughout the stay.

The retreat arrives as experience-led travel continues to gain momentum, with more women choosing shared outdoor experiences over conventional vacations. Interest in gatherings that prioritize community, movement and time in nature has grown steadily, and Camp Social reflects that shift toward travel built around connection rather than consumption.

"Camp Social exists to give women permission to unplug, play and make new friends without any pressure," said Liv Schreiber, speaking for Camp Social. "So many campers show up on their own and leave with a whole group of people they now call friends. That is the heart of what this experience is about."

Each camper also receives a swag bag of skincare products, snacks and goods from partner brands, and an on-site store offers Camp Social merchandise. Round-trip transportation from New York City is available, and a detailed arrival guide supports those driving in. Partnerships with nearby hotels assist campers traveling from farther away.

"Rediscovering summer camp as an adult is surprisingly powerful," Schreiber added. "There is something about being out on the lake, learning archery again or gathering around a fire that helps women slow down and reconnect with themselves and one another. Opening the waitlist early gives campers the chance to plan ahead for 2027."

Camp Social has been featured by media outlets including Daily Mail, NBC, Business Insider, Bloomberg and Teen Vogue. Tickets for the 2027 season go live on September 27th, 2026, and joining the waitlist places prospective campers first in line when dates are announced.
