The Winfield Collection Alerts Woodworkers to Scam Copycat Websites

July 16, 2026

LINDEN, MI - July 16, 2026 -
The Winfield Collection has issued a public advisory to its customers and the broader woodworking community regarding the emergence of scam copycat websites impersonating the company. As a trusted provider of woodworking patterns and supplies for more than 40 years, the company is taking steps to protect hobbyists from these deceptive online operations that mimic its branding and offerings.

The company, known for its extensive collection of full-size woodworking patterns for yard art, seasonal decorations, scroll saw projects, and more, became aware of multiple copycat sites in recent months. These unauthorized platforms use variations of the company name in their web addresses but operate on different domains such as those ending in .shop, .net, or .org. They are not affiliated with The Winfield Collection in any way.

According to information shared directly from the company, the scam sites create fake duplicates of its store, complete with product listings drawn from its catalog. They lure potential buyers with fabricated deep discounts that do not exist on the legitimate platform. Shoppers who proceed to checkout are prompted to enter personal and payment information, which is then misused for unauthorized transactions.

The Winfield Collection maintains that its sole official website is www.thewinfieldcollection.com. All legitimate orders and customer interactions originate from this domain. The company has operated from its physical location in Linden, Michigan, and has built its reputation on providing reliable, full-size patterns that enable woodworkers of all skill levels to create professional-looking results with materials readily available at local home centers.

"Woodworkers who have relied on our patterns for decades deserve to know when unauthorized parties attempt to exploit that trust," said Mike Easler, President of The Winfield Collection. "We have always prioritized clear communication and quality resources for our customers, and this advisory is part of our ongoing commitment to transparency in the crafting community."

Easler continued, "Full-size paper and downloadable woodworking patterns remain a cornerstone of what we offer because they deliver the precision and ease that hobbyists expect. Customers should always verify the domain before making any purchase to ensure they are engaging with the authentic source that has supported their projects for over four decades."

The advisory highlights several practical ways to identify legitimate operations. Users are encouraged to carefully examine the URL in the address bar before entering any data. The company does not maintain a mobile app on major platforms, and any such app claiming affiliation should be avoided. Deals that appear unusually generous warrant extra scrutiny. Official contact details, including the customer service email format, appear consistently in the footer of the genuine site.

This development occurs amid broader industry trends where established craft suppliers face challenges from digital impersonators. The Winfield Collection continues to expand its offerings through both traditional full-size patterns and a virtual catalog that provides convenient, eco-friendly access to its library of designs. Projects range from patriotic yard displays and holiday decorations to furniture plans, wildlife motifs, and garden accents that enhance outdoor spaces.

The company?s patterns are designed for use with common tools such as jigsaws and scroll saws, incorporating detailed instructions, material lists, and painting guides. This approach has enabled thousands of individuals to complete projects that add personal touches to homes and gardens while fostering skills in woodworking. Many designs emphasize durability for outdoor use, employing exterior-grade materials that withstand seasonal changes.

The Winfield Collection has responded to customer interests by maintaining a wide selection that includes seasonal items, religious motifs, wildlife shelves, and functional pieces like clock projects and mailbox covers. Its commitment to quality has earned consistent positive feedback from the crafting community, reflected in high customer ratings over an extended period.

As part of its customer protection efforts, the company recommends resources from established organizations on recognizing online shopping risks. By sharing this information, The Winfield Collection aims to reinforce safe practices within the hobbyist community without disrupting the creative process that brings its patterns to life each day.

The Winfield Collection specializes in woodworking patterns and plans along with related supplies. For more than four decades, the company has supported woodworkers by offering detailed, full-size designs for a variety of indoor and outdoor projects that appeal to beginners and experienced makers alike. Its catalog features options for yard art, scroll saw art, furniture, and seasonal displays, helping customers transform simple materials into lasting creations.
