May 09, 2016 -
Torrid Technologies, Inc., a company based out of Marietta, Georgia, has recently released the 2016.3 version of their award-winning Retirement View software for Mac computers. The new version includes several important enhancements and improvements. The software has been in circulation and consistently updated since 1994 when it first appeared for the Mac operating system.

The software was designed to help individuals plan their retirement, even if they aren't that good with a computer and know little about financial planning. It is also used by financial advisors to create visual retirement plans for their clients. Torrid Technologies founder Tim Turner says, "Our Retirmenet View software is for anyone concerned about whether they are saving enough for retirement. It's more robust than free internet calculators and way easier to use than most complicated software systems."

Currently, Torrid Tech is offering a free demo of the software from the company's website at http://www.torrid-tech.com. The tool is described as being easy to use, easy to learn, and uses a simple fill-in-the-blank system. It works instantly and accurately to create your retirement saving plans in less than 15 minutes.

The Retirement View software for Mac can be downloaded directly from the Torrid Technologies site for both individuals and financial advisors. From there, potential users of the software can read the reviews of current customers, speak to a member of the team or learn more from their knowledge base.

A unique video tour of the capabilities of the 2016 retirement view software release is also available through the website, providing some insight into the upgrades and additional content which users can benefit from during the retirement planning process. This walks users through entering data such as Social Security, Pensions, investments, benefits, special expenses, and other cash disbursements. It also shows why using a basic online calculator for this type of planning is inefficient and dangerous.

Price varies between the personal edition, couple's edition, and professional edition, but all versions offer the same colorful graphics, real-time experience, and uncomplicated process to provide users with effortless planning potential. The company invites interested parties to download the trial version and see for themselves how easy it is to build your own retirement plan and take control over your retirement finances.

RetirementView software is available on both Mac and Windows computers, as well as tablets. Consumers use it for do-it-yourself retirement planning for both employees and those already retired. Financial advisors use RetirementView to build retirement plans for clients that they can see and discuss changes to avoid running out of money.
