

Skin Elevé Announces Expanded Access to Dysport and Jeuveau Tox Treatments in Chatsworth and Surrounding Communities

July 20, 2026

CHATSWORTH, CA - July 20, 2026 -

Skin Elevé, a medical spa based in Chatsworth, California, has announced the continued availability and expanded accessibility of Dysport and Jeuveau Tox treatments for residents in additional communities throughout the San Fernando Valley. The service is now being promoted to individuals in Simi Valley, Northridge, Porter Ranch, West Hills, Reseda, and Canoga Park, expanding awareness of a treatment that has become one of the most widely requested non-surgical cosmetic procedures in the United States.

The announcement reflects Skin Elevé's ongoing efforts to provide access to medically supervised aesthetic treatments for adults seeking options to address visible facial lines and signs of aging. The medical spa offers a range of aesthetic services, and Botox treatment joins its broader portfolio of skin rejuvenation and wellness procedures available to clients from across the region.

Dysport and Jeuveau Tox is a prescription injectable treatment that works by temporarily reducing muscle activity in targeted areas of the face. The treatment is commonly used to soften the appearance of dynamic wrinkles that develop from repeated facial expressions. Areas frequently treated include forehead lines, frown lines between the eyebrows, and crow's feet around the eyes.

The expansion announcement comes amid continued public interest in minimally invasive cosmetic procedures. According to industry reports, injectable treatments remain among the most frequently performed aesthetic procedures nationwide due to their relatively short treatment times and limited recovery requirements.

Skin Elevé stated that residents from its extended service areas have increasingly sought information regarding Botox procedures and treatment eligibility. The organization's latest announcement is intended to increase awareness of available services and provide educational information on how treatment is performed, what prospective clients can expect during appointments, and the role of medical evaluation in determining treatment suitability.

During a typical consultation, a qualified provider evaluates an individual's facial anatomy, aesthetic goals, and medical history. Treatment plans are then developed based on the client's specific concerns and desired outcomes. The injection process itself generally requires only a brief appointment, and most individuals resume normal daily activities shortly afterward.

Botox works by blocking signals between nerves and selected muscles. As muscle movement is temporarily reduced, the skin above those muscles may appear smoother. Results typically become visible within several days and continue to develop over the following weeks. Treatment outcomes vary depending on individual factors, including muscle strength, treatment area, and personal physiology.

Mary Bilbulyan, owner of Skin Elevé, said the expansion reflects growing demand for aesthetic services that fit into busy lifestyles while offering a non-surgical approach to facial rejuvenation.

"Many individuals are seeking treatment options that can address visible signs of aging without surgery or extended recovery periods," said Mary Bilbulyan. "The goal is to provide access to medically supervised aesthetic services while ensuring every client receives an individualized assessment and treatment plan based on their unique concerns and objectives."

In addition to cosmetic applications, Botox has become widely recognized for its versatility within modern aesthetic medicine. Medical professionals often emphasize the importance of personalized treatment planning, as facial structures, skin conditions, and aging patterns differ significantly from one individual to another.

Skin Elevé noted that patient education remains a central component of the treatment process. Consultations are designed to help individuals understand both the potential benefits and limitations of injectable treatments. Providers discuss expected timelines, treatment longevity, aftercare recommendations, and factors that may influence outcomes.

The medical spa reports that many clients seek Botox as part of a broader skincare strategy that may also include facials, microneedling, laser-based treatments, and other aesthetic services. By combining different approaches, practitioners can create treatment plans tailored to an individual's skin condition and long-term aesthetic goals.

Industry observers continue to note increasing interest in preventative aesthetic procedures among younger adults as well as continued demand from mature clients seeking to maintain a refreshed appearance. This broader demographic interest has contributed to sustained growth in non-surgical cosmetic services across the United States over the past decade.

As awareness of aesthetic medicine expands, providers have also emphasized the importance of receiving treatment from trained medical professionals operating within regulated clinical environments. Appropriate consultation, medical screening, and treatment planning are considered essential components of patient safety and satisfaction.

The expanded availability announcement also reflects changing patterns in healthcare and wellness services, as residents increasingly seek specialized treatments closer to home. By extending awareness efforts into surrounding neighborhoods, Skin Elevé aims to make information about medically supervised cosmetic procedures more accessible to local residents.
