

Good Day Garage Doors Oak Ridge Alerts Homeowners to Summer Garage Door Warning Signs

July 29, 2026

Oak Ridge, Tennessee - July 29, 2026 -
Good Day Garage Doors Oak Ridge is educating local homeowners about critical warning signs that often emerge during summer months when garage doors face increased stress from heat, humidity, storms, and frequent seasonal use.

The combination of East Tennessee's high summer temperatures and elevated humidity levels can accelerate wear on garage door components, making early detection of problems essential for preventing costly breakdowns and ensuring home security.

"Summer conditions in Oak Ridge create a perfect storm for garage door issues to surface," said Lior Hason, owner of Good Day Garage Doors Oak Ridge. "The heat causes metal components to expand, humidity affects lubrication, and increased daily use during summer activities puts additional strain on springs and openers. Homeowners who recognize warning signs early can avoid emergency repairs and maintain reliable operation throughout the season."

Common summer warning signs include grinding or scraping noises during operation, which often indicate worn rollers or misaligned tracks. Shaking or vibrating doors suggest loose hardware or deteriorating components that require immediate attention. Delayed opener response, where the motor hesitates before engaging, signals potential electrical issues or opener strain from overheating.

Uneven door movement represents another critical indicator that homeowners should monitor. When one side of the door moves faster than the other, the spring system may be failing or cables could be stretching unevenly. Frayed or damaged cables pose serious safety risks and require professional evaluation immediately.

Sensor troubles become more prevalent during summer months as direct sunlight can interfere with safety beam alignment. Doors that reverse unexpectedly or refuse to close completely often trace back to sensor issues exacerbated by temperature fluctuations and sun exposure.

Opener strain manifests through unusual sounds, slower operation, or motors that run without moving the door. These symptoms indicate the opener is working harder than designed, potentially due to spring imbalance or track obstruction.

Doors that stick in certain positions or fail to close securely compromise both convenience and home security. Weather seal deterioration, common after exposure to summer heat and UV rays, allows moisture, pests, and hot air to enter the garage, affecting energy efficiency and storage conditions.

"Regular visual inspections and listening for unusual sounds can help homeowners identify developing problems before they result in complete failure," added Hason. "Professional maintenance becomes especially important during summer months when environmental factors accelerate normal wear patterns."

The company recommends homeowners test their garage door balance monthly by disconnecting the opener and manually lifting the door halfway. A properly balanced door should remain in position without drifting up or down.
