

Government Auction Announces Expanded Nationwide Land Catalog Featuring Regions Known for Wildlife and Outdoor Recreation

September 21, 2026

Los Angeles, California - September 21, 2026 -

GovernmentAuction.com, has announced an expansion of its nationwide catalog of undeveloped land, adding new parcels across multiple states and organizing its listings to reflect regions recognized for outdoor recreation and wildlife. The update is part of an ongoing effort by the online marketplace to catalog properties in areas of the country where natural surroundings and public recreation shape the character of the region.

The expansion includes additions to the company's California holdings, among them undeveloped land in Modoc County California in the northeastern corner of the state. The parcels are offered through the company's online auctions and Buy Now Store alongside listings in states such as Arizona, Arkansas, Colorado, Nevada, New Mexico, Texas, Utah, and Wyoming.

GovernmentAuction.com has structured the new listings so that regional context is available to those reviewing available parcels. Modoc County provides one such example. The parcels the company offers there are separate, privately transacted properties and are not part of, and do not necessarily adjoin, the publicly managed lands described in regional overviews. The company draws this distinction so that individuals reviewing listings do not infer that advertised parcels provide access to or border nearby public recreation areas.

Northeastern California contains several publicly managed areas administered by federal and state agencies. Modoc National Forest, managed by the United States Forest Service, spans a portion of the county and includes forests, high desert terrain, and volcanic features such as the South Warner Wilderness and the Medicine Lake Highlands. The Modoc National Wildlife Refuge, administered by the United States Fish and Wildlife Service, provides wetland and grassland habitats that support migratory birds along the Pacific Flyway. These sites are managed independently of any privately held land and are referenced only as general regional information.

Land in Modoc County California falls within a part of the state characterized by forests, wetlands, and open terrain. The company has said that its cataloging approach applies the same regional-context framework to parcels in other states as its inventory grows.

Ray Perry, Marketing Director, addressed the catalog expansion. "GovernmentAuction.com has broadened its inventory and organized listings so that individuals can review undeveloped parcels alongside factual information about the regions in which they are located," Perry said. "The addition of new parcels reflects continued demand for undeveloped land across a range of states, and clear regional context helps people evaluate what is available."

Perry noted that the company maintains a distinction between the parcels it sells and the separately administered public lands that appear in regional descriptions. He said the expanded catalog reflects the company's function as a marketplace for undeveloped property rather than a promoter of any single location or attraction.

The expansion adds parcels to an inventory that ranges from small lots to larger acreages. Listings are searchable by state and parcel size, and each entry includes descriptive details about the property.

GovernmentAuction.com is an online marketplace for buying undeveloped land across the United States. Through its Buy Now Land Store and weekly online land auctions, GovernmentAuction.com connects buyers with available properties in multiple states and regions, offering an accessible way to explore and purchase land online. The company specializes in undeveloped land and provides flexible purchasing options designed to make land ownership available to a wide range of buyers.
