

White Oak Landscape Expands Commercial Landscaping Support for Atlanta Living Communities

August 18, 2026

MARIETTA, GA - August 18, 2026 -

White Oak Landscape has broadened its focus on commercial landscaping for apartment complexes, lifestyle centers, and residential communities throughout the Atlanta area. The move responds to growing demand among property managers seeking well-maintained outdoor environments for residents and tenants.

As multifamily housing and mixed-use developments continue to grow across metropolitan Atlanta, the outdoor spaces surrounding these properties have taken on greater importance. Communities increasingly view serene, updated grounds as an essential part of the resident experience rather than an afterthought. White Oak Landscape has directed its commercial services toward meeting that need, working with property owners and management teams to maintain and improve shared outdoor areas.

The company has worked with numerous apartment complexes and lifestyle centers, tailoring its approach to the practical realities of high-traffic residential settings. Such properties require consistent upkeep, seasonal adjustments, and attention to detail across large and often complex sites. By concentrating on the commercial segment, White Oak Landscape aims to provide the reliability and scale that community managers require.

"Living communities depend on outdoor spaces that feel welcoming and cared for, and that requires a steady, thoughtful approach rather than a one-time effort," said Rocky DeVotie of White Oak Landscape. "The work has expanded because property managers across Atlanta are recognizing how much the grounds contribute to the daily experience of the people who live and gather there."

Commercial landscaping for residential communities differs in meaningful ways from single-property work. Apartment complexes and lifestyle centers often include common areas, walkways, gathering spaces, and green zones that serve many residents at once. Maintaining these areas calls for coordination with property staff and an understanding of how residents actually use the space. White Oak Landscape has structured its offerings around these considerations, positioning outdoor living as a shared community asset.

The emphasis on lifestyle centers reflects a broader trend in the Atlanta market, where mixed-use developments blend housing, retail, and communal areas into single destinations. Outdoor environments in these settings must accommodate steady foot traffic while remaining inviting throughout the year. The company reports that its collaboration with such properties has grown alongside the expansion of these developments in the region.

"The goal is to help each community present its best outdoor face throughout the seasons," DeVotie said. "That means consistent attention and a plan that fits the property, its residents, and the way people move through the space every day."

White Oak Landscape provides commercial landscaping services to businesses and residential communities across the Atlanta area. Its work centers on apartment complexes, lifestyle centers, and other living communities that rely on maintained outdoor environments for their residents and tenants.
