Charles J. Argento Earns Recognition in Regional Legal Feature

July 30, 2026

HOUSTON, TX - July 30, 2026 -
Personal injury trial attorney Charles J. Argento has been included in the Houston Chronicle's "Best Truck Accident Lawyers" feature, a curated listing highlighting attorneys who handle commercial trucking cases in the Houston area.

Argento has represented individuals and families in litigation involving commercial trucking collisions, including cases with multiple defendants, federal trucking regulations, electronic logging device data, and reconstructed accident evidence. His practice has handled matters involving large commercial vehicle wrecks, including rollovers, jackknife collisions, and underride incidents.

Commercial trucking litigation differs from standard vehicle collision claims due to the applicability of the Federal Motor Carrier Safety Regulations and related state transportation rules, along with corporate liability principles that arise when a commercial carrier, rather than an individual driver alone, may bear responsibility for a crash. A fully loaded commercial truck can weigh many times more than a standard passenger vehicle, and the resulting disparity in mass is frequently a factor in the severity of injuries sustained in these collisions. These weight differences often mean that occupants of smaller vehicles bear the greatest risk of serious injury in a collision, regardless of fault.

Evidence in commercial trucking cases, including driver logs, electronic logging device downloads, dashcam footage, and vehicle maintenance records, is often subject to routine retention and disposal policies, making early evidence preservation a common early step in this type of litigation. Investigations frequently involve accident reconstruction specialists and review of driver hours-of-service compliance, cargo loading procedures, vehicle maintenance history, and hiring and training practices by the motor carrier involved. Liability in these cases can extend beyond the driver to the motor carrier itself, and in some instances to third parties responsible for vehicle maintenance or cargo loading.

"This recognition reflects work our team has done on behalf of clients affected by serious commercial trucking collisions," said Charles J. Argento, founding attorney of Charles J. Argento & Associates. "Every case involves a person whose life changed because of a preventable crash, and the legal process should hold every responsible party accountable under applicable law."

Commercial truck crash volumes have been a continuing subject of attention in transportation and logistics hubs generally, where high volumes of freight traffic intersect with dense commuter corridors, and cases involving them frequently require more extensive investigation than standard vehicle collision claims.

Charles J. Argento has led Charles J. Argento & Associates for more than three decades, building a practice centered on personal injury and commercial trucking cases.
