

Majestic Outdoors Earns More Than Ten NADRA Deck Awards

July 28, 2026

DURHAM, NC - July 28, 2026 -

Majestic Outdoors, a family-owned deck and outdoor living contractor owned by Jay Beswick, has earned more than ten awards from the North American Deck and Railing Association across the 2022, 2024, and 2025 national competitions. The Durham, North Carolina company also holds TimberTech Platinum, Belgard Master Craftsman, and Certified StruXure Design and Builder credentials, and sits on both the TimberTech and Belgard advisory councils.

The North American Deck and Railing Association, known as NADRA, holds an annual national deck competition that draws entries from builders across North America and has recognized outdoor-living projects nationally for more than a decade. Submitted projects are judged by industry professionals who evaluate design, craftsmanship, material selection, and overall execution. Winning entries are documented with project photos and descriptions and reviewed against the competition's published categories. Majestic Outdoors has placed in categories that include composite and alternative decking, deck framing, hardscape, and pool decks, with several first-place finishes. Its first national recognition came at the 2022 competition, and the company added six honors in 2024 and four more in 2025. Award listings for the company are published on the association's website.

At the most recent competition, the company's honors included first-place recognition in an alternative-deck category and in a framing category, along with additional placements. NADRA presents its awards each year at an industry event that recognizes projects completed during the prior season, which places the company's most recent wins among the current group of national honorees.

The company's manufacturer certifications reflect a similar focus on outdoor construction. TimberTech Platinum is the highest tier in TimberTech's contractor program and requires documented installation volume, verified craftsmanship standards, and ongoing training. The Belgard Master Craftsman credential applies to hardscape and patio work and verifies advanced training in Belgard paver systems. The Certified StruXure Design and Builder designation covers the company's louvered pergola installations. Seats on the TimberTech and Belgard advisory councils give the company a role in shaping product development and installation standards.

Custom decks remain the center of the company's work. Majestic Outdoors designs and builds composite and PVC decks in-house, moving each project from a design consultation and 3D model through permit acquisition, framing, and construction. Projects begin with three-dimensional design so homeowners can review layout and materials before construction, and the company sets footings on helical piers or concrete depending on the site. The company engineers and installs its own framing, an approach it credits for structures suited to the North Carolina climate. Its work extends into paver patios, pergolas, and porches that complete an outdoor living space.

"The recognition reflects the team's focus on custom deck construction and the standards set by the manufacturers behind the work," said Jay Beswick, owner of Majestic Outdoors. "Earning more than ten NADRA awards over several years points to consistency rather than a single standout project, and the certifications carry the same expectation of training and verified quality."

Majestic Outdoors traces its start to the owner's arrival in North Carolina, and it shifted its focus to residential deck and patio construction as the business grew. Beswick holds a general contractor license and a background in landscape design. The company operates from a design showroom in Durham that clients visit by appointment. It reports more than 1,000 completed projects over more than twenty years of building in the Triangle region, and it backs its construction and installation work with a five-year craftsmanship warranty. The service area covers the greater Raleigh-Durham area across several surrounding counties.
